The Soudan war correspondents returned to London yesterday. They speak indignantly of the cavalier treatment they have been subjected to by Sir Henry Kitchener. They say they were kept in the dark as to everything that was going on, and their messages were mutilated by the cen-

The Daily Chronicle publishes from its correspondent, Mr. Charles Williams, as doyen of the newspaper men, a warm protest on the subject. He says: "It has indeed become a question whether a self-respecting man can submit himself to the conditions now required from a correspondent. Mr. Williams concludes with remarking: "So, many persons, acting with the sirdar's authority, though probably not with his countenance, have in every way given the bulk of the correspondents to understand that they are not wanted."

GEN. KITCHENER'S NARROW ES-CAPE.

It leaked out this week that Gen. Kitchener had a narrow escape from death through treachery during the battle of Omdurman. He was riding with his staff in front of a Soudanese battalion, which was advancing, when at least a dozen bullets whizzed past his head. Gen. Kitchener galloped away as fast as he could, and word the battalion. There is no doubt the perpetrators were some of the recently enlisted dervishes.

The city corporation has decided to present Gen. Kitchener with the freedom of the city and a sword of honor. TOD SLOAN MAKES A SENSATION.

The event of the sporting week has been the reappearance of Tod Sloan, the American jockey, on the Manchester race course, where he carried the Lorillard-Beresford stables with good success. He met with a great recep tion at the paddock, and crowds followed him everywhere. His first victory aroused intense enthusiasm, and he was cheered to the echo.

A comparison having been made between the riding of the late Fred Archer, the famous English jockey, and Tod Sloan, Lord Wm. Beresford has given the opinion that Sloan is a distinctly better jockey than ever Archer

Gen. Bates, the United States military attache, has returned to London after following the French army maneuvers. "I am profoundly impressed by all I saw. The list is headed by Lord Donoughmore, with 14 companies, and includes the Earl of Essex and Lord Arthur Butler.

MAN MANGLED

Fell Frem a Freight at the Wortly Road Bridge.

His Left Arm and Leg Cut Off-The Right Arm Broken and the Fingers Smashed.

"For God's sake, kill me!" was the pitiful cry that attracted the attention of Watchman Ryan immediately after the west-bound freight, No. 99, had passed over the Wortley road bridge at 6:10 a.m. today.

Edward Hughes, a lad 17 years of age, from all that can be learned, had boarded the freight en route to his home in Burtt, Mich., a small town about thirteen miles from Saginaw. When just east of the Wortley road the young fellow fell off the bumpers, and dropped beneath the moving train.

The man's cries and groans brought Bridge Watchman Ryan to his assistance, and the latter says it was a horrible sight that presented itself. Hughes lay alongside the track with his left arm severed near the shoulder, his right arm broken and the fingers smashed, while his left leg was almost cut in two about four inches below the There was blood on everything around.

A crowd soon gathered, and a boy was dispatched for Dr. Piper, while a telephone message was sent for the am-bulance, which arrived about in a an hour later. Hughes' condition was heartrending. He repeatedly begged to be killed and have his misery ended. He was removed to the general hospiwhere he received every attention. but he is not expected to recover. Hughes was seen in the early morning near the old race course, apparently waiting for a freight. At the hospital Hughes said his home was at Burtt, Mich., and that his nearest relatives lived in Detroit.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE MOTH AND THE FLAME," Local theatergoers are doubtless anticipating the engagement of the Kelcey-Shannon Company at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night, Sept. 29, with more than ordinary interest The presentation of a new play, the work of one of the most brilliant American dramatists, by a company of popular players, are very good reasons for this expectant interest. The play was received in other cities with such strong evidence of approval by the public and press, and the Kelcey-Shannon Company, headed by Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, are so pleasantly known here, that there seems to be every reason to anticipate as favorable a verdict as they have obtained else-where. Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon have been so long associated with genteel comedy and plays distinctive for their dignity and refinement, that they almost stand by themselves among reigning stars in this respect. An added element of interest of their appearance in Mr. Fitch's new play, "The Moth and the Flame," is that they will both be seen in characters decidedly different from any they have ever played here, and whose impersonations were highly lauded in other cities in which they have played. They have surrounded themselves with an exceedingly capable company of actors, whose finely balanced work has been favorably compared with that of the very best permanent stock companies. Mr. Fitch's new play has been declared in many quarters as the most distinctive American drama of modern society life that has yet been written. Recalling the splendid impression which his other plays have made in this city, the presentation of his latest play will be awaited with an unusual degree of consideration and interest. "The Moth and the Flame" deals with society life in New York city, among the very fashionable people who are usually denominated the "smart set" of the "400." The main theme is said to be strongly dramatic, happily relieved by comedy interest of decided originality. The contrast of incident and character is most marked. There are strong intense moments in the play, while the dialogue in the lighter scenes has all the airy brilliancy and spontaneity of humor in which Mr. Fitch has shown himself to be such a thorough master. The first act of the play takes place at the town house of the Molton's, where a masquerade party is in progress, at which all the guests appear in fancy children's costume. Marion Molton, a young woman of rather serious frame of mind, yet who is fond of gaiety, falls in love with Edward Fletcher, who is young, handsome and rich, but whose past career is black with a number of disreputable love affairs. Marion is warned, but the more her friends accuse Fletcher the more she loves him. It becomes known during the festivities that her father has misused funds entrusted to him. Overwhelmed by the threatened disgrace on the morrow he retires to his own chamber and kills himself, but it does not become generally known to the guests. Fletcher comes to the relief of the family secretly with money. He leads an irreproachable life during the following year, and shortly afterwards leads Marion to the altar. The wedding, which takes place in the chapel of a fashionable New York church, is interrupted by a young woman who accuses Fletcher of wronging her in the past. The ceremony breaks up in The rest of the story is confusion. very cleverly managed, the author having dexterously veiled the denouement and so manages to hold the attention of the audience until the final curtain. Fitch's treatment of the play is said to be exceedingly unique as well as original. REAL WIDOW BROWN CC. On Tuesday, matinee and night, "The Real Widow Brown" Company will open at the Grand. The comedy is rplete with fun, fast and furious, and is greeted with bursts of applause and merriment everywhere. The mistakes of the young man who is doing his best to personate the real charming widow are most ludicrous. He is assisted by two jolly fellows and a couple of bright, pretty girls. is full of complicated situations, the unraveling of which causes unbounded merriment. The company is under the management of Mr. A. Q. Scammon, who has many other successful comedies on the road, including "The American Girl," "The Burglar," and American Girl," "The Burglar," and "Side-Tracked." He has given special attention to the selection of artists for this company, which includes many well-known favorites. The costumes are

new and handsome. THE PONTON TRIAL

AILSA CRAIG'S FAIR

The Attendance Spoiled by Two Days Rain-Large Number of Entries.

The miserable weather of Friday was responsible for the small attendance of visitors at the Northern Fair in Allsa Craig, but it did not to any great extent interfere with the number of entries, which were about equal to last year's, when fair-day was a beautiful one and the attendance big. Those who did brave the elements saw a good class of exhibits, but missed the speeding events, which had to be called off on account of the track being a puddle of mud, though the racing men were willing to take the money if it were hung up by the directors. The entire absence of fakirs made things less lively than in former years, when the grounds were usually crowded with them. One lonely sweat-board was in operation, opposite the Munroe House, the owner of which was "cleaned out" by three natives, who rung in a "pho-

The directors and shareholders of the factory met on Feb. 21 last and discussed Mr. Cockburn's propositions.
