HUNT PEST KILLERS.

Experts Travel Far in War on Gypsy and Brown-Tail Moths.

Two scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture have been sent abroad to search for parasites which will eradicate the gypsy and brown-tail moths. These pests were introduced into the United States several years ago, and following an interruption due to war conditions, the search has now been resumed. S. S. Crossman and Dr. John N. Summers, who have been associated with this branch of the work in the Bureau of Entomology for several years, left recently to take up the hunt in Europe and Japan, respectively.

Prior to the war parasites were received in this country and were propagated and disseminated throughout the areas infested with the pests. Many of the species imported were successfully established, and it was proposed to continue the work of importing, studying and colonizing in the field of the two pests in their native homes. The outbreak of the war, however, prevented this.

It is believed that much benefit will be derived from further work abroad in importing beneficial parasites to aid in the control of the pests here. A number of the species imported prior to the interruption did not become established, for various reasons, some of which are not well understood at this time. It seems certain, it is said that some of these species can be established.

Mr. Crossman will visit Portugal, Spain, Italy, Austria, Czechoslovakia, France and Germany in an endeavor to supplement the information which the department already has regarding moths in their native homes, as well as the parasites which attack them. Dr. Summers will visit localities in Japan that promise the best results.

With Reservations.

It is a good thing that the Ten Commandments do not have to be ratified by the American Congress. If they did there would be a tough and uncharted course ahead of them. If they finally did make it there would either be eight or fourteen of them. They couldn't stand at the original ten.
