How to Build a Telephone Line

(Continued from page 12) workman on the pole. On curves and workman on the pole. On curves and corners the arrangement of wires with respect to the insulators is different. Here the wire is always on the side of the insulator next to the outside of the curve. The rule to go by is to place the wire so that estress will be against the insulator and not against the tie wire.

On curres a guard wire should be placed over the line wires to prevent them from dropping into the road in case on should come loose from an insulator. The guard should be a piece of havy wire (No. 9). Staple one end of the wire to the end of the cross arm dithen run it over the tops of the insulators and fasten to the other end of the same the property of the same than the same t guard.

For running from the pole on the line to the house of a subscriber, an insulated drop wire is best. If a grounded circuit, use a single strand wire, and if a metallic circuit use a twist-part of insulated wires. Insulated wire is better than the bare wire, because it will take up the vibration of the line wires and prevent the disagreeable humming that is caused by the wind on the line wires. (To be continued next week.)
