By Special Wire to the Courier. London, July 12—The Manchester Guardian referring to the German submarine Deutschland, says that plans for submarines of 3,000 to 4,000 tons existed in Germany and England before the war, but that such vessels were not built because of the time required to submerge them and the impossibility of submerging in shallow water. It points out that the Australian submarine A-E 2 went from Australia to the Dardanelles Russian Offensive is Heavy, and says that if the captain and the crew of the Deutschland are members of the Imperial navy the submarine may be dealt with as a naval auxiliary. Otherwise she is a blockade runner which could be ordered to stop, and if she attempted to submerge it would be justifiable to sink her.

London, July 12.—General Sir Douglas Haig made the following announcement last night:

"After ten days and nights of continuous fighting, our troops have completed their methodical capture of the whole of the enemy's first system of defence on a front of 14,000 yards (more than eight miles). "This system of defence consisted of numerous cotinuous lines of fire of numerous cotinuous infes of interpretenches, support trenches and reserve trenches, extending to various depths from 2,000 to 4,000 yards, and included five strongly fortified villages, numerous heavily wired and entrenched woods, and a large number of immensely strong redoubts.

"The capture of each of the trenches represented an operation of some importance. The whole of them are now in our hands.

German Success Short-Lived
"The German success in the recapture of the Trones Wood, after six costly assaults, was of short duration. To-day we recaptured nearly the whole of the wood, all but the northernmost end being again in our hands.
