ABOUT BUYING COWS.

It is not the Cow who Gives Most Milk at the Best Season That is Wanted

Feed and Pasture Also Important Elements in Raising Good and Saleable Cattle.

When we were buying cows occasionally, says the Boston Cultivator, it was not much satisfaction to us to ave the one who wanted to sell a tell us she gave so many quarts a day "in the best of the season." We had handled cows and milk for years and in selling milk would have been rilling to have obtained considerably less in the flush time if we could have get more in the worst of the season.

We had owned two cows standing side by side in the barn and running in he same pasture, one of which gave to 20 quarts at her best, while the er never excelled 14 quarts a day. he 18 quart cow received the most rain, but shrank to 12 quarts as soon the other and to six quarts before he other did to eight, while she went is good desh. Decorating the Dinner Table At tractively With Flowers.

Why Many Clerks are Dischliging to Women Customers-It is Quite t xcusable gor an engagement dinner the posts of a country house decked her table with pink dahlias shading into yellow, loosely put together with leaves whose tints merged from russet brown to golden. These were laid on a napery of cream Roman satin and, forming an outer heart, was an entwined circle of true lovers' knots in pale narrow blue satin ribbon. Each electric silver candlestick was sur rounded by a heart in similar flowers, sof-tened by a yellow chiffon shade fringed with silver. All the table glass was in pinky yellow Salviati ware, and in each dessert bowl was orange flower water with a sprig of myrtle floating on the top, symbol of dear constancy.

On another occasion the same woman produced a brilliant red Irish linen tablecloth almost covered in trails of white chrysanthemums woven with spikes of upstanding gladioluses. The center of this unique table was one complete mass of feathery maidenhair fern, through which shot tiny sparks of electric light, and at either end were heaped in antique white porcelain dishes pears, apples and luscious black grapes. Prettiest, perhaps, of all was a summery decoration in silver green pongee ornamented with water lilies in clear crystal bowls, round which twined autumn pink roses, culminating in the center with a miniature lake and fountain on which floated the pure white blossom.—New York Commercial Adver-

Maltreated Store Clerks.

"The reputation which some large stores get for being disabliging to their customers or having uncivil clerks could in the majority of cases be traced directly back to the shoppers themselves," writes Edward Bok of "Systemless Shopping" in Ladies' Home Journal. "I make no claim of perfection for the clerks who stand behind the counters of our great stores where women shop. They are only common mortals, full of faults. But considering what they are called upon to ough and endure at the hands of thoughtless women the constant wonder s that they are so civil and obliging. It the truth could be known, it would be found that they suffer far more than they inflict suffering. If the roll could be called of hardworking, innocent girls who have lost their positions because of Ill founded complaints made by 'influential' customers whose accounts the firm could not afford to lose, it would be a roll of disgrace to American shoppers. The girls behind the counter are human-although from the actions of some women we might believe otherwise-human in their faults, but also in their finer feelings. Very often they represent better families, better breeding, than that which is revealed to them from the other side of the counter."

IN AN OLD GARDEN.

Come down to that old garden Of every flower we knew,
When out of gates of childhood
The airs of morning blew,
And arching heaven was painted
In every crop of dew.

And you may have the lily With all her virgin snows, And you may have the beauty
That blushes on the rose;
But I will have the heart's ease, The dearest flower that blows

Who will shall have the balsams
And store of hydromel,
The purple of the monk's-hood,
With poison in his spell;
Who will shall have the sweet-william And the Canterbury-bell.

I love the breath of rosemary, I love the breath of rosenary,
The perfume of the stock;
The proud perfume of the fleur-de-lis,
The silken holyhock;
I love the flaming poppy.
And the sleepy four o'clock.

But they say that when great angels
Fell plunging from heaven's frown,
A spirit looking after
Lost a blossom from her crown—
I know it was the heart's-ease
Came softly floating down.

Oh, bright the honeysuckle,
And sweet his tipping crew;
The birdwings of the columbine,
The larkspur, blue as blue—
But I will take the heart's-ease,
And all the rest take you!

One Woman, at Least, whe wa not Ashamed of her Pearly Artificials

One of the last things people like to admit usually is that their teeth are not their own in the sense of not having grown in their mouths. A single member from a porcelain factory is not objectionable. The need of it might be caused by an accident or for a good many reasons, but when it comes to several and a plate, then the subject becomes a delicate one.

But there was a woman in the street cars the other day who apparently had a brand new set of teeth and she was strangely proud of them. She first attracted the attention of passengers by the smiles that she lavished upon them indiscriminately. Every smile brought the new teeth into view more prominently and the evidence that they were false and the people began to smile quietly themselves. But even then the woman was not sure that her new treasures were properly observed, and, drawing in her lower lip, she brought her upper teeth down upon it and tapped them carelessly with her finger, looking off into vacancy meanwhile with a conscious air of uncon-

Roars of laughter came from the students.

"Genesis is not so old as you suppose," continued the professor. More roars-so long continued, indeed, that the worthy man had time to think before he made the next remark. He said timidly-and he managed to hit the mark this time:

"I may not be thinking of the same Genesis as you are!"
