THE NARKA.
Narka watched the breakfast of light, and it seemed as if the coming and going had been a dream. A week ago this legacy would have been the realization of the cherished dream of her life; it would have represented the fulfillment of all that her poor mother had longed for—freedom for her child, and comfort and ease for them both. They had wanted for nothing, thanks to Prince Zoroff's generosity, Sily's loving kindness, but both mother and daughter had a spirit that chafed under the burden of such obligations, and to be free from these, to be independent of pecuniary help, was their greatest desire. Then Narka longed to take her mother abroad to those healing springs in her native Germany, and after that to travel and see some of the beautiful places that Basil told her about, and that her own imagination had pictured to her out of books. The tragedy of her father's and her brother's death had fallen like a deadly blow on her youth, and crushed the natural desire of her life for amusement. She had never shared the common delight of girlhood in innocent games and dress and dancing; those springs were broken; but perhaps for that very reason her desire for other enjoyments had developed more strongly.
She longed to escape from the scenes of her life's great sorrow, as if this right of the body must in some degree carry her spirit away from its pain; while the intellectual hunger of a healthy mind longed to be satisfied by new places and new phases of life. The long winter evenings had many and many a time been shortened to herself and her mother by dreams and plans that were to be carried out when old Count Schwarzenfeld died and left them the independence he had promised on hearing of Lark's exile and their consequent restoration. And now the promise had been fulfilled, the fairy had come to their door with the purse and the seven-league boots and Narka could not even feel if the money could serve to rescue Father Christopher and get Basil safe out of Russia, how joyfully would she have paid it away, and renounced her day-dreams forever!

She had walked a long way—so long, that even her elastic young limbs recoiled at the fact that they had to carry her back. She made up her mind not to announce the news to Madame Lark today. She was not sufficiently maître of herself to play the rejecting part that would be expected of her; moreover, in her mother's weak condition of health, another sudden shock, such as pleasant one, might be hurtful; and there was no hurry; the good news would be as good to-morrow. She was debating whether she would go in to her mother now or come down later in the afternoon, when the sight of Sily's pony carriage at the cottage gate settled the question, and she went in.

In Narka's eyes there was no lovelier thing in nature than the picture of Sily with Tante Nathalie, as Madame Lark was called in the family. When she entered the room now the young Princess was edifying to the widow, and the little dainty that she had brought from the castle, and insisted on making her seat. Madame Lark yielded under protest, graciously declining to leave every roomful that she had no appetite, and that there was no reason why she should force herself to eat, or to live all. Sily patted her as if she had been a child; her manner was as full of kindness and sympathy as the light of her eyes. Madame Lark had been pretty in her youth, with that soft, rosy German complexion that wears better than the regular beauty; she was a soft, fair, fat, round little woman, with nothing to resemble of Narka's grand lines, and her eloquent coloring; but there was no lack of intelligence in her features, and the majesty of a great sorrow had set its seal upon her.

"Tante Nathalie is a great deal better to-day," said Sily, when Narka came in.
"Yes, my dear, it is, but that is always so. I tell her, 'Now, my dear, you must not let me put you lying down,' and she confirms, saying that Madame Lark had eaten the last spoonful of her little dainty meal."

"I am so sorry sitting so, my dear," said the widow.
But Sily insisted. She had a notion to make people lie down must be good for them.

Madame Lark gave in, as she always did with Princess Sily.
"We must get her out for a drive tomorrow," said Sily, turning fondly toward her, and putting a quilled silk elaborate—her own gift—over Tante Nathalie's head.
"No, no, protested Madame Lark, shaking her head. 'No driving about in a prison.
Wait till he is out.'"

"Your moaning and worrying won't help him to get out," said Sily.
"That is what I tell her," said Narka, standing at the end of the sofa.
Why does not Basil write? It is a bad sign that he does not write," said Madame Lark. "It must mean bad news."

"It means more likely no news," said Sily. "But in any case he would not have trusted the news to the post; he said so."

"If he had good news he would have managed to send it somehow," persisted Madame Lark. In her little self, obstinate way, shaking her head. "Good news is sure to come."

"It is about four o'clock in the afternoon of the sixth day after Basil's departure; the lamps had just been lighted; M. de Beaumont, Sily, and Narka were in the drawing-room. Suddenly a loud barking of the dogs announced some arrival, and before there was time to conjecture who it might be, the door opened, and Basil walked in. Sily ran to embrace him, and the others greeted him with glad expressions. After the excitement of the meeting was over, Sily said:

"And Father Christopher? Have you succeeded?"

"Yes; the warrant for his release was signed the day I left," An exclamation of deep thankfulness came from all.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

Mr. B. talks about the husband's Progressive Tenth Party.
Mr. Bowser suddenly looked up from his paper the other evening and asked:
"Why is it that we haven't given a progressive tenth party this winter?"
"They have been voted too much trouble," I replied.

"Well, Mrs. Bowser, I shall give a progressive tenth party next week, Wednesday evening. If you'll see to the refreshments I'll see to the people."
"I'll be glad to, of course, but—"
"What wait?"
"You must prepare yourself for disappointment," "Oh, I must! How kind of you to give me warning!" Mrs. Bowser, I don't want to seem vain or egotistical, but I'll invite thirty-six people here on that night, and for every one who fails to come I'll give you a $50 bill."

"You are kind—very kind. I hope the party will be a great success. You can begin at once."
"When can you come next night? I had a list of eighteen couples who had been invited and solemnly promised to come."
"You don't much trouble—can't get people easily," answered Mr. Bowser, as he looked over the list. "It is in the management, Mrs.
Bowser—all in the management."

"For three days he walked round on tip toe to see how he could get the whole family to come. The first set back. We were at last in the management. Mrs. Bowser was satisfied for the moment.
"I wanted to tell you that we can't come down to the party."
"You can't?"
"Yes, I can't. I have just remembered that I agreed to go over to Johnson's on that night. Sorry, but I can't help it."

"Mrs. Bowser, don't you ever hear of a man who says 'I can't' and then does it?
I'll see to it that you don't. I can fill their places in five minutes. I'll see to it that you don't get out of the house there was another thing."
"Basil, how?"
"I'll see to it that you don't get out of the house there was another thing."

ODDS AND ENDS.

An epidemic of scarlet fever in portland is attended with unusual fatality.
Henry's Case of the human race according to a high authority, there from one or other form of blood taint. Never allow the least hint of developing into serious disease while the blood can be kept pure and as such Burdock's Blood Purifier. A medicine equals B. B. B. as a blood cleanser.

The society girl may not know every thing but she can paralyze those who do, just the same.
TAYLOR'S CASE.—I had a very bad pain in my side of which one bottle of Hayward's Yellow Oil made a complete cure.
I hope that this may be of some benefit to those who read it. A. R. T. Walker, 444 High St. City. Hayward's Yellow Oil is a specific for all inflammatory pains.

It will, of course, come under the head of current news when criminals are executed by electricity.
The Levant Train Case from Mr. J. Hayward, 120 Chatham St. Montreal, says: "I was once taken with biliousness and headache and I never found any other remedy so effective as Burdock's Blood Purifier.
In fact one bottle made a complete cure."

French Failure.—Many persons become feeble and fall in from disease of the blood, liver, kidneys and stomach when constipated and bilious. Burdock's Blood Purifier and regulating tonic, restores and restores to perfect health.
Chinese Family, consisting of six persons live comfortably for a month
