A FEW POINTERS.

The statement in the Gleaner of Wednesday last that Messrs. Bellamy and Anderson had their resignations all prepared and ready to be handed in is like the political announcements of the Gleaner generally-without a shadow of foundation. Gregory, Crocket & Co., we venture to predict, when they get through with the election petition business, will closely resemble the old countryman who caught up a wasp's nest in his fingers, which he regretted his inability to let go of as he would like. This county does not want the turmoil of another election: a few sore heads, who think that in the dispensation of local government patronage they ought to have been considered, you are acting the part of a stupendous if Mr. Bellamy had deserted the governfraud when you are whining and crying | ment carried by bribery? You will not, because advice he would remain in his present answering the public inquiry: What time and talents. right have you to complain of corrupt practices in others, when your own hands are reeking with the same taint? What right have you to indignantly denounce treating by the agents of the government party, when Alonzo Staples, your own business partner, dispensed rum for the election and personally carried it to the Parish of Bright on election day, and scores of others, besides Crocket and your own sons, spent money and dealt out rum for your election? If you had not paid money out yourself, or furnished to your son as treasurer of the opposition party, or written all over the province begging subscriptions to aid you in the contest, and had known nothing of the means employed to secure your return, you might be a proper person to file a petition; but, as it is, your conduct is unworthy a man aspiring to represent the people.

The organ of the purists calls upon the opposition to organize. "We would again," says the Gleaner, "impress upon the op position the advisability of organizing." Of course we would, and why don't the opposition respond. The organization does not seem to materialize. We suggest that the purists, Gregory and Crocket, change their tactics. Instead of making themselves ridiculous by their calls to arms, which no one takes any notice of, we recommend that they try calling a convention. Come gentlemen, get out your posters; summor your opposition friends to council and get out your ticket. What are you waiting for? Of course you believe what you say, and you say the members must resign. Then having the business in your own hands, it depends upon you whether there will be an election or not. So why linger? Get out your call and shew us your strength. Now we are slow to make prophecies: we have the dreadful fate of the Gleaner before us as a prophet, and we forbear, as a rule, but we venture this one prediction: That Messrs. Gregory and Crocket will not call a convention until they are sure the seats are vacant, even if they do then; and the reason they will not is that they dare not. We say advisedly they dare not; they would thereby expose their utter weakness. Therefore we join the cry. We say to the opposition: Organize, let us see you, what you look like and who you are.

We are serious in our advice to the wants to get its party of soreheads into some kind of fighting trim, instead of some kind of fighting trim, instead of applied to by parties interested. I there-publishing editorials that it is the duty of fore contend that Mr. Risteen cannot the opposition to organize, and that now is the time to do it, to issue a call for a convention. Messrs. Gregory & Crocket are the party, there will be no jealousy if a call should be issued by them. Get out your posters gentlemen. Organize by all means.

the responsibility and risk, I will go on. Are you prepared to do so?

Mr. Gregory—I do not think your honor the responsibility of deciding this question ought to be thrown on me. I would prefer having your honor take the responsibility. Let we willing to go on however

We have not been able to learn up to the time of going to press with what success Mr. Gregory is pushing his claim upon the opposition party in Victoria for a nomination. We understand Mr. Porter. the recently defeated candidate, will not contest the county again at present, and has promised Mr. Gregory to use his influence for him. Mr. Gregory will have one advantage in running Victoria. He has never been defeated there, and another advantage open to him is that when defeated by Mr. Baird he may be able later on in the season to run for York, if there should gested that if the present members for York are obliged to resign, they might do so, one at a time, so as to permit Mr. Gregory opposing each one in turn. This plan has its merits but we almost fear that on the ground of expense the government might not be able to entertain it.

Mr. Gregory cut a very sorry figure in running off to Boston so as to evade service of the counter papers by the sitting members in the election petition case. Friday the 18th was the last day for serving these papers upon Mr. Gregory to enable the members to shew up the illegal practices committed by him, and Thursday afternoon this bold vindicator of purity in electook him out of the province. We should have throught he would have stood his ground manfully after the sanctimonious pretensions of purity he has been putting forward. The Gleaner says, and Mr. Gregory says, he did have business in Boston. If he had it was a business which might be better transacted in darkness than daylight, for the purist so regulated his arrival and departure as to get into that city on Friday evening and leave on Saturday morning.

No, No! Our friend the vindicator will have to tell some other story, but the rapid flight to the "Hub" did not accomplish all that was expected of it. The glorification among the opposition friends on Friday evening "over Blair's discomfiture" did not last long. While Mr. Gregory was wending his way homeward Mr. Blair was obtaining a process from Judge Palmer postponing the trial to July, which was just exactly what the champion of just exactly what the champion of moral rectitude in elections did not antici-

Mr. Blair—The act of assembly amending the shorthand reporters' act requires the official reporters to attend election there is a doubt about whether Mr. Risteen is the proper person. If Mr. Gregory means to suggest that I have been instrumental in Mr. Risteen coming here out of his or-der he is quite mistaken. I did not know what reporter would be here, nor was I certain that any reporter at all would attend. My own impression is that Mr. Devine is the proper person.

Judge Tuck—Was Mr. Risteen assigned to take this circuit or why is Mr. Risteen here? Mr. Risteen why did you attend

Mr. Risteen—I came here at the request of the chief justice. I understood that this court was coming off, and knowing that the other reporters were engaged, I asked the chief justice if I had better come and he instructed me to do so.

Mr. Blair — The difficulty that I see is, and the one suggested by Mr. Gregory's objection, is that Mr. Devine is the proper person to attend this court and Mr. Risteen is not. Judge—I will communicate with the chief justice and will now adjourn the court until two p. m.

Judge—The case will then continue, the objection being reserved. Petition read. Sheriff Tibbitt's first witness called: He proved the election returns from the several polls, and that in the parish of Perth the returning officer did not sign the de-claration of the result of the voting at that poll. Mr. Baird according to the check list got forty nine of a majority of votes.

The check list corresponds with the list of voters who voted. Everything is regular except that the deputy returning officer has not signed his name to the statement of the regult

Baird did not tell him to come after he voted and he would pay him. Did not pay him. The only thing he got for his vote was a dinner ticket from Baird. I may say that I am advised Mr. Baird is taking this step for this reason alone. No evidence, I am instructed, can be adduced against Mr. Baird which can disqualify him, and at any other time he would contest this petition.

Mr. Blair—I do not think that removes the difficulty Mr. Gregory has referred to, and I think that there is an objection. Judge Tuck announced that he had received a telegram from the chief justice requiring Mr. Risteen to act.

There are, all told, in the new organization a triple circus, double menagerie, Roman and modern hippodromes, a double menagerie, Roman and modern hippodromes, a double menagerie, remove spectacular productions, entitled "Cinderell" and the "May-Poll Dance;" there is an aviary also and a huge aquarium; and ordinary little circus such as pays its annual visit in this section, the only wonder is how having been assigned, as I assume he has been, for this circuit under the act, no money. Our readers will find in our adverso much can be shown for so small a sum of tising columns a partial list of the wonder in store for them; but, of course, it must be understood that not one-tenth of the attract tions of the big twelve are there enumerated A full list of the sights to be seen under the huge tents would require more space than ally deserving of mention, however, are the hippodrome, the circuses, the great museum and that innovation which all will greet with surprise, the electrolode, the new machine by which justice is meted out to murderers, by means of science, and electricity instantly snaps out the life of the criminal, in the prisons of the state of New York. It is simply impossible to number the riders, gymnasts, athletes and performers of all kinds in the great circuses and great spectaculars, the number of curios in the museums or the number of animals in the menage so the job is given up in despair.

The street parade will leave the circus grounds at 10 o'clock on the morning of the

He returned to Grand Falls last Saturday night, and reported that the game had flown. Three days before he reached the place the woman came out and took; the Quebec steamer. The man was not to be found. None of the natives know where More Hippodrome Riders and he is. The little hut, 12 miles in the woods, which the two occupied all winter was empty. Silcott bought the lumber and had the hut built. It was near the camp of some lumbermen, who supplied the couple with most of their food, for which they were well paid. To all persons they professed to be very poor, and when peeple came into the hut they found the woman wrapped in an old quilt, which she claimed was all she had to cover her

On the way out to the steamer her old wooden box was accidentally broken open, and a lot of silk dresses and other finery exposed. The lumbermen say the couple had plenty of money. During the winter they were taken with la grippe, and came out to the settlement for assistance and medicine. Mr. Mayberry has no doubt the man was Silcott, but is of opinion that he will elude pursuit now by taking a European steamer at Rimouski, on the St. Lawrence, or he can travel through the woods for some miles towards Quebec, and take a stage for forty miles farther. It is understood that being an offender against the United States government, the dominion government is ready to deliver him over if caught, or to proceed against him for living with a woman not his wife.

The French Government was not concerned in the quarrels between England and Newfound land, and did not believe there would be any complications with America, becaus it was improbable America would allow herself to become mixed up in the affair France was not averse to arbitration. She had no ill-feeling toward England on account of the Egyptian question. Judging from the amicable tone already displayed, the official added, there was good reason to hope the dispute would be solved in a perfectly satisfactory manner.
