THE SNOW.

From the Buffalo Commercial The tempest is out,-Oho! Oho! Right merrily falls the fleecy snow And trellis and fence, and drifted pane, Are gay in their wintry garb again : While naked bramble, and bending spray, Have garlands fit for a king to-day, And childhood is up with a shout,—Oho! How merrily falls the fleecy snow.

The willow, still in her summer leaves, On the winds her varied fret-work weaves,-Her delicate twigs, and fairy form, Are ever the last to bide the storm, As over the garden, and the tomb, She watches and wails the passing bloom ; In sorrow and beauty, well fit to be, Alone and unchanged, the mourner's tree; While over the ice-touched hearts below, So carelessly falls the fleecy snow.

The mountain ash, with her crimson freight Is jeweled and plumed, in regal state, And flaunts abroad, in her winter's sheen, As bright a belle at gay sixteen ; While under the graceful, white-robed vine, To the gathering burden gaily lift, And dream old dreams of the mountain drift ; So merrily falls the snow, -Oho ! Right merrily falls the chrystal snow

Away through the storm's grey depths profound, There's a sail on the waters outward bound; What seek ye of joy where the sold wave flows? Come back to your cheerful homes, -it snows Doth the glitter of wealth, -the hope of gain, Shine, luring you over the frozen main? But ah, in the hearts ye leave behind, There's a pang as they list to the howling wind, A thought that stifles the pluse's flow, Though merrily, merrily falls the snow.

Oh t better than gold is the peaceful home, Where gather the loved when dark hours come, No matter how humble, if on its shrine The ground may glitter,—the storm may shout.—
The winds, and the wealthy may flaunt without:

But their farme and hierbridge here have been for ages, the I'll heed alike their dazzle, and din, If they leave me love's warm boon within ; While merrily falls the snow, -- Oho ! While merrily fails the snow,

A welcome guest is the falling snow:

(Loyalty ! The supon legislatures did surely chest me, (Beautifully original! When my claim from England went through their hands, They said to me you are entitled,

But in the mean time you'll get no lands.

[Splendid !] The Earl Bath to me did say, Your recommend gives you a tittle, To any lands in the Canadas. (What pathos!)

The new legislature I have now embraced, And wait with patience my claim to see; If not like Cobbet there is new reformation, In contemplation you will surely see.

To the Hon. Baldwin I dout my petition, And with submission he received the same, For I really think he's a second Byron, (How chaste !)

(And an odd ox !) To scan my merits and put me in office, Their word and honor sure they pledged to me, I was advised to get the Governer's answer, [Melodious as a boy hammering a tin pan!]

And I proceeded both stout and bold; He sayed to me you shall have an office, Your name for it then it is entoled But their fame and hirth-flast han been with joy ;

But you an orator and I a neet. Would gain the premium for sweet Fitzioy. [Tremenduous cheering!]

PROGRESS OF TEMPERANCE.
