A Literary Curiosity.

A lady occupied a whole year in searching for and fitting the following thirty-eight lines from English and American poets. The whole reads almost as if it had been written at one time and by one author.

Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour?

HELENA GRAHAM,

THE BRIDE'S SACRIFICE

CHAPTER XI.

It was late in the afternoon of the following day when Herbert Clinton left the lodgings for Mrs. Ben's cottage. Curiosity to see the rescued ones prompted the visit as much as any other feeling, and he walked along rapidly, viewing the scene of desolation which the preceding night's tempest had left.

The cottage door was open to admit the pleasant sunshine, and Herbert paused for a moment to view the scene before he entered.

Mrs. Ben went bustling about the room in her usual breezy, chirruping way, talking incessantly, but in a subdued tone, as though afraid of disturbing some one. Jessie sat near the window, bending over her sewing, looking pale still, after the terror and excitement of the previous night.

But her eyes did not linger a moment on her work; they were fixed, as if fascinated, on another, who lay stretched on the sofa, propped up with pillows. It was the woman, or rather the girl he had saved. What was there in that pale young face to make him start so vehemently, while the blood rushed in a crimson torrent to his very temple. He only saw a small, slight figure, short, crisp, golden curls, clustering over a round, white, polished forehead; bright, save, gray eyes, half veiled now under the long silken eyelashes, resting on the peaty cheek; a little ruffled mouth, and a nose decidedly retroussé. It was not a wonderfully pretty face; but there was something bright, beautiful, original, and charming about it—something daring, defiant and high-spirited, as you could see even in its pallor and languor. She might have been sixteen, though she scarcely looked so old as that.

She lay back now, with her little white hands folded listlessly on her lap—her wild eyes fixed upon them with a dreamy, abstracted look, as if of one whose thoughts are far away—replying low and languidly to Mrs. Ben's ceaseless questioning. An ill Herbert Clinton, pale and excited, leaned against the door-post, gazing upon her like one who cannot believe his senses.

Suddenly, Jessie raised her eyes from her work, and uttered an exclamation, as she caught him. He could linger no longer, and like one who walks in his sleep, he passed in.

The clear dark eyes of the little lady in the chair were raised on her guest, and fixed with a look of complete amazement on his face. Her dark eyes dilated and her lips parted in surprise, as she made an effort to rise from her chair, and then sank back exhausted.

"Herbert Clinton!" broke in surprise from her lips.

"Fanny!" he exclaimed.

And he was by her side in an instant, holding her hands in his, and gazing in her eyes with a look that would have aroused Helena's jealousy had she been present, but which only proved to her, who, with Mrs. Ben, looked on in astonishment.

"What is the meaning of this?" she asked, covering her face with a woman's embarrassed silence; "certainly, the last spot on earth I should ever look for the gay, pleasure-loving Herbert Clinton. So, sir, I presume you have been talking the world easy here in this enchanted vale, while your poor, deluded friends were laboring under the conviction, you were improving your mind, which needed improving, goodne knows, or foreign travel? Pretty conduct, Mr. Clinton, I must say."

JOHN HOGG'S

NEW STORE.

IT IS GRAMMED

WITH NEW GOODS,
FRESH GOODS,
AND CHEAP GOODS
FROM CELLAR TO ATTIC.

The Great Rush of Old and New Customers astonishes every one.

His New Prices are so Cheap that the wonder is, how such excellent Goods can be sold at so very low rates. But the reason is very clear, JOHN HOGG himself, with money in hand, visited the best manufacturing places in England, Ireland and Scotland, and the United States, and bought his entire Stock, for ready money, and at bottom prices. That is why I can, and will sell my Goods at lower prices than any other store in Guelph. My plan of doing business always has been

Small Profits and Quick Sales

The days of long profits I have put an end to. I am a man who commenced to knock down long prices, and I am determined to continue to do so. Support the man of enterprise and progress.

BELL ORGANS AND HALLET & DAVIS PIANOS

STRAUSS, the celebrated Waltz composer, to Hallet, Davis & Co.—

GENTLEMEN,—
Having heard your Pianos at the World's Peace Jubilee, and also used them during my stay in Boston, I am free to say that I have never before seen pianos possessing such a combination of truly wonderful quality and quantity of tone, meeting at once the wants of the largest Concert Hall and the drawing room.

I consider them superior to any pianos that have come under my observation.
JOHANN STRAUSS.

The following Musicians

- Of world wide reputation give these Pianos their hearty commendation:
- FRANZ LISZT, The First Pianist in the World.
- GOTTSCHEK, The well-known Pianist.
- P. S. GILMORE, Director of the World's Peace Jubilee.
- WM. MASON, The celebrated Pianist, Organist and Composer.
- H. SARO, Royal Prussian Musical Director.
- M. PAULUS, Leader of Band of the Republican Guard of Paris, at the Great Peace Jubilee.
