BREACH OF CONTRACT.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—Mr. Norman Smith, president of the Canadian Press, said: "This is not a strike over wages; it is a strike to break a contract between the company and over wages; it is a strike to break a contract between the company and the union. The clause in the agreement of 1920, providing for arbitration of all disputes, as inserted by the arbitrators, of whom I was one, with the specific intention of preventing, if possible, the Canadian Press rom ever being debarred, even temporarily, from carrying on its important work of distributing news. The Canadian Press and its members, the daily newspaper publishers of all Canada, are fighting for the sanctity of contract. Of what use publishers making agreements with any unions making agreements with any unions if the signatories thereto are to be free to repudiate their contracts whenever it suits them to do so?"

Warning to Telegraphers.

Your general committee have no tified the management that a strike of our telegraphers will go into effect this afternoon. It becomes my duty to warn you of the seriousness of the step you are taking. The wage dispute might have been and would have been accommodated, no doubt, satisfactorily to all concerned if your eneral committee had accepted the proposal of the company to arbitrate under clause 22 of the present agreement. The wage issue becomes now unimportant. The issue you make when you go out on strike is the breach of the agreement you entered into four years ago, and which is still in effect so far as the arbitration clause is concerned, and under which the company has offered, and still offers to arbitrate the entire dispute. The company will be willing to abide by the award of an arbitration of the entire dispute, under clause 22, if follows:
your general committee will similarOn tw pour general committee will similarly agree. But by going out on strike you break the agreement between the Canadian Press and the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America entirely, and we cannot thereafter negotiately, and we cannot thereafter negotiately and the commercial through the medium of a board of conciliation appointed by the department of labor, and on each of these
