The case of Wong Woonv, the corporation of the city of Victoria was heard in the Supreme court yesterday before Mr. Justice Crease and a common jury, with Mr. R. B. Esnouf as foreman, Mr. H. D. Helmcken appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. W. J. Taylor for the city. The action is for damages in the amount of $1,000, which the plaintiff alleges to have suffered by reason of the action of the civic anthorities in compelling him to go to the Ross Bay suspect station on his arrival from China on May I, and there detaining him until he and his baggage had been put through the fumigation process. The case is a test one and will determine several other suits of precisely similar character. The principal point for settlement by the jury was whether or not Hongkong was to be considered an infected port at the time the plaintiff left there. The answer was in the affirmative, and argument was adjourned until a later day.

The door of the city morgue yesterday morning opened to receive the body of William Hurd, a bartender, who was found floating in the harbor at the foot of Johnson street. From appearances the body had not been long in the water, and this is borne out by the fact that the deceased had been seen the day before on the street. There seems little doubt but that his death was purely accidental, there being no marks on the body save a few bruises on the face. Hurd had been a very heavy drinker, and when last seen alive on Tuesday is said to have been under the influence of liquor. He has been in the city for five years or more and was well known about town. As far as known he has no relatives living in this city, but his mother is said to be a highly respectable and well-to-do resident of Baltimore. His last place of employment was the Caledonia saloon, at the corner of Store and Cormorant streets, but he had worked in many other places in town. An inquest will in all probability be held to-day.

J. P. Elford, one of the conciliators for Mr. Adams, "Well, my opinion is that it is one of the best moves that has ever been made in the province. You know the trouble is that both parties to a difficulty of this kind come to any discussion of the matter with their minds made up that they are right and warmly positive that the thing must go their way or not at all. The employer is perhaps money out of pooket and feels that the workman should bear part of the loss, while the workman is quite as sure that he exercised due care, and should not be made to stand what he feels is only part of the usual risk of those who undertake a contract. Then this act brings between them men who have no interest in the matter other than to see that justice is done to all concerned. They hear all that both sides have to say, and are in a position to render a much fairer verdict regarding the matter than either of the interested parties.

"In the recent case we had no trouble to come to a conclusion and effect a fair settlement in a few hours. I do not know to whom the credit is due for the suggestion of the move, but it is certainly a very good one in every respect. I know considerable about such matters, and I should say that if a settlement of difficulties between employers and employes joannot be arrived at by means of this act it cannot be rescaled by any other. It is a step in the right direction and one the use of which should be encouraged."

"My opinion?" replied Mr. John Brades, who, with Mr. Brown, acted on behalf of the stonecutters, "well, I think that it will settle many a walk out before it becomes a strike, When men have a grievance and quit work in order to have a settlement, the sooner as agreement can be arrived at the better, "Than will come the conciliators with a calm judgment to put this law into effect, and I think that in most cases they will restore peace before a strike is ordered. This will be a great swing to all parties concerned. I hope that the speedy settlement of the first case will influence thos

LONDON, June 27.—Guy Nickalls, the careman, the present holder of the diamond sculls, rowed over the Henley regatta course to day in 8 minutes 25 seconds, beating the record. J. J. Ryan, the Canadian carsman, who is regarded as Nickalls' strongest competitor for the diamond sculls, has not yet tried the course at a racing pace, but the favorable impression he has made in nowise lessens. Many predict that Ryan will win. In any event the race is likely to be very close.
