RICHELIEU AND ONTARIO STEAM

BOAT IRREGULARITIES

(To the Editor of The World) SIR: About as disgraceful a piece of knavery as can be imagined occurred on one of the steamers comprising the Richelieu and Ontario royal mail line. At one o'clock on the morning of Sunday, 27th ult., six passengers were at the Cobourg wharf of the line awaiting transportation to Toronto. After waiting in the shed on the wharf for about five hours, one of their steamers, the Spartan, hove in sight, and hope, hitherto almost gone, revived again.

Trunks, were got out, haggage made ready, the passengers coming out on the wharf amidst the pouring rain, when lo! the steamer wore round again making towards Toconto. Notwithstanding the calls and remonstrances of the passengers and the whatfinger she continued her course and that was the last that was seen of her. It is difficut to understand such conduct on the part of the captain except upon one theory, which is doubtless the reason, namely, that the number of presengers was too small. This theory is the most plausible from the fact that the Spartan came into within fifty feet of the wharf-before she altered her course, and that the weather was by no means such as would prevent her entering on the score of safety. I am informed too, upon reliable authority, that this is by no means the first time that similar tricks have been played by them, and in all probability, presuming upon their own strength and the silence of their unfortunate victims, they will do so again. In this instance two of the passengers were ladies; furthermore this conduct on the part of the steamer necessitated all the passengers borrowing money to enable them to return to Toronto. Fortunately they had friends in Cobourg, and were enabled to proceed home by rail otherwise they would have been in a disagreeable fix. Is there no law to prevent such disgraceful tactics as this? is difficut to understand such conduct on Paris expects some day to become a seaport, even though it is far inland. The Seine is a tortuous and shallow stream. Seine is a tortuous and shallow stream. Now and then, though rarely, tourists make the trip up the rive from Havre to Rouen. It is proposed to dredge the channel deep enough for ocean steamers all the way up to Poissy, making thus a tidal basin 150 feet wide and over 100 miles long. At Poissy the bottom of the river will then be fifty feet below its present level, that being the ameunt of fall between that point and the sea. From Poissy a series of locks will bring vessels up to the walls of Paris. The cost of the enterprise is estimated at $50,000,000.

Lizzie Hammond, a chambermaid in a San Francisco hotel, being detected in a Syrup," &c. fourth story room where she had no business to be, attempted to avoid exposure by climbing out of the window and sliding to the ground by means of a telegraph wire that passed by just within reach. Before she had descended many yards the wire burnt her hands as though it was red hot, and she was compelled to let go. In falling her body bounded back and forth between two parallel walls. This loosened the momentum of her descent, which was still further diminished by striking on a telephone wire. She thus escaped being killed by the fall, but the physicians found that her neck was disjointed as it would have been by hanging. They chloroformed her, set her neck back in its proper place, and now have hopes that her youth and strong constitution may carry her through.

Among the reported schemes for the evafourth story room where she had no business

But the Chinese traders are likely to get around the immitraders are likely to get around the immigration law by bringing on every business trip two or three women spiece from China, whom they will pass off as their wives. The immigration of merchants and their families is not prohibited by the new law, and it would be next to impossible to disprove the claim that women so brought over are wives duly enrolled in wedlock. It might even pay Chinese traders to make trips for this special purpose.

A controversy has been in progress for three years among the trustees of the Boston public library concerning the quality of fiction on the shelves. They are agreed that many books in the library are unit for general circulation, but they are not unanimous about the amount of oversight that should be placed on the reading of the public. The worst books have been placed by themselves, and anybody who unanimous about the amount of oversight that should be placed on the reading of the public. The worst books have been placed by themselves, and anybody who has come of age can get them without going to the trouble of searching the catalogues. The majority of the trustees willing to have the supervision of books issued to minors made a little more strict, but the minority go father. They ask for a new examination of all the works in the juvenila and feting all properties of the library. have the supervision of books issued to minors made a little more strict, but the minority go farther. They ask for a new examination of all the works in the juvenite and fiction departments of the library, and the removal of all such as are "of a positively immoral character, if any," such as "tend to lower the moral tone of the render," and such as "tend to encourage a spirit of irreverence concerning religion and virtu." From the books that remain they wish to have besides an approval list prepared for issue to boys and girls.
