Complimenting a Globe Reporter. A World reporter ran across a number of men who had been up for drunkenness yesterday in the police court, and he was informed by them that they, and others of their unfortunate class, were thinking se-riously of presenting the Globe reporter who writes the daily introduction to the "drunk column" with a semi-centennial medal. They alleged they were all charmed with the beautitul little moral with which he introduces the list of the men who get drunk and find their way into court to his readers.
