preted as being levelled at the Irish members, but it did not so strike me, and, on it being. first proposed, I suggested to friends sitting around that the debate could be well terminated by its acceptance. The original proposal in the constitution gave the Irish parliamentary party ten of a representation on the council, but excluded them from election by the county conventions, and having myself suggested this scheme to Mr. Parnell to prevent susceptibility being aroused by the possibility of M.P.'s overtopping less known men in the county ballots, thereby swamping the council, it seemed to me that if what Dr. Davitt styled "nonparliamentarians" were satisfied by a different arrangement, the best plan was to let them have their way. It happened, however that in the course of some of the speeches which had previously been made by Mr. Davitt, there occurred references capable of a slighting or sneering construction toward the unfortunate members of Parliament, and as it was notorious that the most prominent of the American supporters of the nationalization scheme had been for some time slanging them roundly for their sins, one of the trodden worms took thought and turned. Ever since Keogh and Sadlier headed the brass band in betrayal of their constituents there has been a very proper reserve in the minds of many honest Irishmen, as to the ultimate possibilities of parliamentary action, and it ought not to be difficult in the minds of extreme politicians to arouse that residum of bitterness which Fenien at-tacks on place-hunting members justly, provoked ten or fifteen ves ago. But those who are not conscious of corrupt intentions at the present time naturally resent the revival of obloquy against a body who, at present at least, are striving under depressing circumstances to do their duty.

THE O'CONNOB-DAVITT BP130DE.

Hence Mr. T. P. O'Connor, rising to oppose Mr. Davitt's amendment, treated it as a vote of want of confidence in the party serving under Mr. Parnell, a view which Mr. Davitt hotly disclaimed in a series of interruptions. The conference up to the rising of Mr. O'Connor, moved by the appeals of the northern delegates, appeared to favor county against provincial representation, and, as Mr. Davitt's amendment contained this principle, it seemed likely to be adopted, when a further amendment was tabled. This admitted the system of county representation, but included the idea that a third of the body should in addition be nominated by the parliamentary party. Mr. Davitt endeavored to get this ruled out on a point of order, which not being sustained, Mr. O'Connor began his address. In an impassioned speech, once or twice broken in upon by the clamor of a Cavan gentleman-who, if he had not eaten all the day, had certainly quenched his thirst—the member for Galway exposed to the conference the character of what he conceived to be the proposal of Mr. Davitt. His eloquence and arguments completely swung the meeting round to his view of the question, but a division had not to be taken. Mr. Davitt, who appeared considerably to feel the imputation that his amendment contained a thrust at the. parliamentary party, asked leave, to speak, as Mr. O'Cennor concluded, and generously withdrew it, amidst the enthusiasm of the audience, who rose and cheered him for several minutes as he did so. His speech in withdrawing was an elequent bit of slashing, marred only by a comparison of the relative length of his own and O'Connor's services. Why there should be any discredit or disabil. ity in one man being ten or fifteen years later out of long clothes than another is not evident. as we certainly cannot all be born at the place. same time; but of the sincerity of Mr. Davitt's disclaimer there cannot be two opinons. It was fully accepted by Me. Parnell, and if Mr. Davitt could previously have been shown in private the construction to which his amendment laid him open, there is no doubt that it would never have been proposed. Debate, however, having been procipitated, there was nothing for mon who thought like O'Conner but to fight it out in the open, but in my opinion

DAVITT'S IMPULSES ARE TOO FRANK AND MARLY to permit him to harbor resentment for an in scarces of his information. He became the former would be compelled to fill their client that, could its occurrence have been general agent of the Associated Press in 1866 orders in Toronto." foreseco, might have been prevented by a few minutes' consultation. I have seen a good many lows between politicians before and behind the scenes for the last ten years, and the more I see of them the less importance I am inclined to attach to their permanent effect on the public cause or even on the final relations of the persons engaged. An organizing committee appointed by the conference to direct the league until an elected council has been returned by the conventions met to-day and elected the following officers of the new body: M. Davitt, Joseph Biggar and Alfred Webb, honorary treasurers; T. M. Healy, Thomas Brennan and T. Harrington, honorary secretaries, with a small sub-commmittee on organization. It will take a month or so before the lergue can get into swing as there are many preliminaries to be arranged, and Mr. Davitt is about starting for a two or three weeks lecturing tour in England, while Mr. Parnell will be engaged in Parliament. But naless outrages break out egain, which of course the government would father on the league to give an excuse for its suppression, a vigorous winter campaign may be expected. T. M. HEALY.

A FRAUDULENT "EXCHANGE." Philadelphia, Nov. 6 -An advertisement has appeared in many newspapers and periodicals, purporting to furnish easy employment and good compensation to persons desirons of entering the j urnalistic ranks. The Pennsylvania Society for the Preventiou of Vice and Crime wrote to the office of the " American News Exchange," the title of the organization at Cincinnail, and received in return a circular containing two cards sup-posed to be "open sesame" to theatres and railroads. It was stated that the cards must first be signed by the reporter and returned, with $3 for the signature of the manager of the exchange. Ballroad officials and theatre managers say the cards are worthless. The "exchange" will be thoroughly investigated.

The death of Marguls Antinori, leader of the Equatorial Geographical Expedition, is announced. No details of the circumstances of his death have been received. The Marquis Horatio Antinori was born of a noble family at Perugia, Italy, about 1812. In early youth he went to Rome, and was employed as a designer of birds by Charles Lucien Bonsparte, when the latter was publishing his "Illustrations of the Italian Fauna." An ordent Republican, he, in 1848, cerved in the army, distinguishing himrelf in defence of Rome. On the entry of the French he removed to Grecer, and later to Turkey, and made scientific collections of birds in various provinces of Turkey and Anatolia. As a sportsman he was very expert. He sent his birds to Italian institutions. In a few years he went to Egypt, and joined the Poncet brothers on a trading expedition to the Upper Nile. Two or three years were spent in Nubia, and thence he brought back to Italy a vast goological collection, chiefly cruithological, which was bought by the Italian Government, and the greater part was placed in the museum of Turin. Then he followed the Government to Florence, and afterward became one of the Directors and paid Secretary of the new Geographical Society. He was sent by this Society to Tunisia, to consider the question of the inland sen. With the Government delegation he went to Egypt on the opening f the Sucz Canal, and again made a naturaliet's expedition to the Upper Nile. The Geographical Society afterwards sent him (1875) as head of an exploring expedition to Shos, in Abytsinia. There he severely wounded himself by accident. His writings have been principally published in the Society's proceedings and other geographical mediums. In appearance, during these latter years, he was a man of fine presence, whose venerable face was bearded with a closely cut crop of

To-day being election day in the United States, the New York and Chicago Stock and Corn Exchanges were closed, and the commercial despatches from Europe were unusu-ally meagre. At the close in Chicago last night the wheat market was steady, closing to to to higher than on Saturday at 92%c November, 94c December, 94fo January. The chief festure was in corn, which contrary to expectation, dropped 2c November to 66%c, and 140 the year to 61 c. Oats were steady at 34 c Nov, 33 c the year. The speculation in Chicago yesterday is described by a despatch to-day as follows:-"Co:n higher early, on unsettled weather; broke on reported large arrivals. Increasing receipts are advised will get plenty of new corn if weather co -tinues good. "Longs" sold on "break;" no trading to morrow. Wheat ateady on local covering, but no real strength. Pro-visions easier in sympathy with corn and increased receipts of hogs." About 90,000 bushels wheat are now on the way to this city, all from Canadian ports, The only transaction of any consequence in wheat is the sale of a choice cargo of white winter at $1 01. A SURE WAY TOA.

HAPPY MARRIAGE! A Book of Instructions for those Betrothed and for Married People.

and for Married People.

Translated from the German by Rev. Edward
I. Taylor, of St. Peter's Fro-Cathedral, Wilmington, Del. 32mo, Cloth, red edges. 75c.
In his letter of approbation to this book the Right Rev. Bishop of Wilmington says: "This work is a most useful course of instructions and should be duly read by all interested in Christian guidance for the Sacrament of Matrimony.
The welfare not only of families but of the whole world depends on true principles in this most serious mat er, and the Church slonegives unchanging directions. And as the large majority is called to this state, nothing is supertiuous in teaching how to gain and preserve the grace of the Sacrament. Indeed, without this grace (as we see in daily and deplorable examples) there can be no blessing, no happiness in the union, and no certainty in attaining the chief object of marriage—the bringing up of children in the fear of the Lord."

"The translation has been carefully made, and is true to the original. We commend it highly to the public."
