PRINCIPALS STATE NEW BASIS IS BAD

Cowley's Scheme to Relieve Overcrowding Condemned by Deputation.

SITUATION AT PRESENT

Seventy-Two Children in One Class in Some Public Schools.

As many as seventy-two children to a class are crowded in some of the public schools.

Such was a declaration made authoritatively to The World yesterday in connection with the agitation respecting Inspector Cowley's scheme for a re-organization on a basis of "an active roll of fifty pupils per teacher as the maximum for a first book class and as the average roll for classes above the first book." Trustees supporting the new basis claim that it would abolish overcrowding next week in 250 first book classes, and that other readjustments would reduce the demand for occasional teachers by from thirty to forty.

Fire Session. A fiery session was before the management committee yesterday. President W. J. Thomson, Secretary Charles G. Fraser and a number of other members of the principals' association were present to indict Chief Inspector Cowley on a charge of attempted overcrowding of the class rooms.

Dr. Conboy raised the point that the matter had been referred by the board to the management committee for action, and that the principals' side was already known to the trustees.

Dr. McKay, chairman of the committee, said that he had consented to the deputation being heard.

A Ten Minute Interview. On a limitation of ten minutes and to the presentation of new matter, the deputation was given the floor. Secretary Fraser was spokesman. He intimated that the principals had not been able to secure a meeting with the chief inspector, and presented a series of resolutions by the principals' association condemning Inspector Cowley's plan.

Trustees Fairbairn called Principal Fraser sharply to task for "lecturing the committee" for limiting the deputation to ten minutes.

On motion of Trustee Fairbairn the issue was referred to the board of inspectors for action, the board of inspectors to give the principals a hearing, the chief inspector being then empowered to proceed with the re-organization of the classes.

Do Not Understand. Chairman McTaggart declared the principals did not understand the proposition.

Secretary Fraser said that all they wanted was a meeting with the board of inspectors.

The resolutions he presented on behalf of the association read as follows:

"The proposal to introduce mixed grades and reorganize our classes on the basis of fifty to a class—not merely in those schools where the lack of

The Healthy Baby's Sleep

Baby's early life is made up of sleeping and eating. Just as soon as he arrives and is made comfortable in this cold and peculiar world, he goes to sleep and sleeps from twelve to twenty-four hours straight. After his meals begin he usually awakens every two hours, hungry, is fed and promptly goes to sleep again. The only breaks in this heaven of monotony are the hour he is kept awake to be bathed, and the hour in the afternoon when he keeps himself awake to exercise and cry. Thus he sleeps twenty-two hours out of every twenty-four for the first two or three months of his life. Occasionally he awakens either in quantity or strength, and the food must be improved in these respects. If this happens with the breast-fed baby his mother must try to feed and rest to improve the quality of her milk. She may find it necessary to give the baby a bottle of milk every day to supplement the natural food. After the second or third month baby begins to take more interest in life and stays awake a little longer each day until at six months he sleeps sixteen hours, from six to six at night, and a two-hour nap morning and afternoon. From nine to eleven in the morning and from one to three in the afternoon is the best time for these naps. If baby sleeps after three in the afternoon he will not be ready for bed at six—and to bed at six he must go until he is great big boy. Twelve hours' sleep is the right of every child until seven years of age; and ten hours until childhood. Many a pale, sickly-looking child owes his ill-health to lack of sleep.

During the first half of the second year one nap a day is sufficient, and this should be taken in the morning. A nap every day is really needed until the fifth year, but some children sleep from six at night until seven in the morning when they are three years old, do not take readily to a daily nap. I have found in such a case that the half-nap breaks the day and gives some relaxation.

accommodation makes it necessary, also in schools where certain rooms will be left vacant and thereby save forty teachers—in our opinion, one of the most retrograde suggestions which have been made in educational circles in years.

"It is contrary to the requirements of the department of education as provided for the highest attendance in the class.

"It is not in accordance with the provisions as laid down even for rural schools as to the seating of a room, allowing the proper distance from the walls and proper width of aisles.

"It will violate the spirit of the requirements which is being observed throughout the province, that where the attendance exceeds forty-five a second teacher shall be engaged."

"It is practically in direct opposition to the opinion of every teacher, principal and teacher in your service.

Violates Policy. "It is contrary to the policy and practice of every school board in Canada and the United States, as indicated by the reports submitted herewith.

"In our opinion it would not be in the interest of economy or of efficiency, nor in the interest of either pupils or teachers."

Objections Answered. The answer to the resolutions given by a supporter of the new basis was that not only was the proposed basis a great reduction in the present maximum in the junior classes, but that it was in full accord with the departmental regulations, as principals related exclusively to rural schools and not to modern urban schools with approved systems for ventilation.

It is understood that the reorganization is likely to be put into effect on Monday, Feb. 9.

Beautiful Bermuda. Bermuda, noted for its beautiful flowers and climate, is again attracting a great deal of attention. Each year seems to be more attractive than the previous, judging from the number that are sailing to this beautiful island. The three steamers, Arcadian, Bermudian and Caribbean, making the trips this year, are being booked to capacity and accommodation is being taken up many weeks before the steamer actually sails. With the rates starting at $30 for the round trip, and the trip itself lasting only 48 hours from New York, it is hard to realize that the tropics are so close at hand. A. F. Webster & Son, at 58 Yonge street, report a great number of Canadians sailing to this beautiful place.

EFFICIENT HOUSEKEEPING

BY HENRIETTA D. GRAUEL

DOMESTIC SCIENCE LECTURER

A New Staff of Life

It will require two generations more of training to make us appreciate the excellent food value of macaroni, tho it is used more extensively each day.

When housekeepers realize that it is to thousands and thousands of families what the potato is to us, and that it offers many more ways of serving than potatoes do, they will experiment for themselves and discover it is another staff of life.

The imported macaroni makes a more satisfactory dish than the American article, as it is glutinous, not starchy. Always break the macaroni into short lengths and cook it briskly in boiling water, well salted. This is called blanching and very necessary to produce the food at its best. Macaroni with hash—Cook and drain three-fourths of a pound of macaroni, place a layer of it in a deep pan and cover with a layer of any minced cold meat, season with salt, pepper and butter. Continue so until the pan is filled. Place in a hot oven until the mixture is heated. A can of tomatoes, drained and chopped, poured over the mixture at the last moment is another way of changing the dish.

Macaroni with fowl is the ideal Italian feast dish. The macaroni is blanched and drained and added to a little chicken broth from which the boiled chicken has been removed. This is thickened with flour and a little cream is added to give richness. Now remove the flesh from the fowl and shred it in bits. Mix this into the thickened macaroni, break a dried sweet pepper in flakes and sprinkle its red shell into the mixture, add salt and a tablespoon of butter or olive oil. Make the mixture very hot and serve at once.

Grate enough cheese to fill a measuring cup. Put the blanched macaroni into a baking dish, mix in the cheese, add salt and just a sprinkle of cayenne pepper. Roll seven crackers, but do not sift them, as cracker dust butter. Mix a tablespoon of corn starch with a pint of rich milk and pour over all. Cook twenty minutes in the oven and serve in the baking dish. This recipe was first sent to the writer by an Italian restaurateur with the request that it be published for the good of our countrymen. Not long after, an Italian washerwoman presented me with a dish of her national food prepared in the same manner, and recently a chef at a well-known hotel insisted on writing the same directions to me, so that this splendid, almost perfect food combination is surely, truly Italian.

Rev. Albert Wareham Declares Roman Catholics Are Ambitious for Conquest.

Rev. Albert Bareham lectured in St. James' Parish House last evening to the members of the Toronto branch of the Imperial British Israel Association. The topic of his lecture was "What We Have by Well." During the evening the speaker referred to the efforts in the past of the Roman Catholics to conquer the world, and the present effort to have home rule established in Ireland. He stated that "Rome rule" and "Home Rule" were practically the same thing.

Some April and May Blooming Alpine "Carpenter"

The Alyssum Family.

As we saw yesterday our rock garden will be a mass of bloom with the Arabis and Aubretia, from early March well on thru April.

But, just when the Arabis are beginning to grow a little tired of sending out such luxuriant masses of white and pinks and lavenders and purples, that have been rioting sunnily among the rocks, suddenly we find a marvelous change of coloring spreading among the eod gray leaves, planted on a little higher level in the rocky.

And in a day or two, a golden cloud of misty yellow covers rocks and stones. This is the Alyssum Saxatile, often called "Gold Tuft," and also "Rock Madwort," the earliest bloomer of the Alyssum plants.

Golden Tuft grows about eight inches high, and both flower and leaf are rather larger than that of the ordinary white or Sweet Alyssum. The leaf of Golden Tuft is not unlike that of the Stock or Wallflower, and is a little wider and very gray in color. The stems are long and procumbent and of the same flexible nature as those of the Wallflower, showing that this natural home is a rocky ledge where the bending stems may be blown about by the spring winds without fear of breaking.

Tuft will bloom straight ahead for a good four weeks if given sun and light, so that its first cousin Sweet Alyssum is just beginning to send out flowering stems as a warning for Golden Tuft to depart, and leave a clear field for the cloud of white that is ready to burst open.

Before leaving Alyssum saxatile we must mention a variety of this branch known as Alyssum saxatile citrinum (sulphureum). This plant sends out very soft, delicate lemon flowers, much more numerous in general shades than the strong Golden Tuft. This perennial flowers at the same time as Golden Tuft.

An old-fashioned Sweet Alyssum, I am sure, hardly needs description, so common is it. Yet I must warn our gardeners to watch carefully among the variety, for a long, thin green worm, that works much havoc. Hard to discover because it simulates the thin green stems of the flowering stalks so closely, the best thing to do about such a pest attack your patch is to spray, close to the earth among the forest of stems, with a strong solution of Paris green. This will rid your plants of the vermin.

Sweet Alyssum is the only one of the branch that is endangered by vermin, strange to say.

This special carpenter is a valuable one, in that it will bloom practically the whole summer and autumn thru. It is advisable, however, when the other Alyssums come along to shear off the flowering tops just as we did the Myosotis, last year, clipping the stems down to within about three inches of the ground.

In order, of course, to have a good early stock of the Alyssum plants it is advisable to sow the seeds early in June so that the plants may be transplanted to the rocky ledges early in autumn.

Coax your plants to become stout and sturdy by continually pinching or clipping off any straggling branches, and not permitting stragglers to reach higher than four inches the first year.

A little care will repay you with splendid stock that will bloom luxuriantly and early, thus following spring.
