

The members of the Board of Management feel that they have cause for congratulation in the progress made this year. They hope that, with the much greater facilities the new Hospital building will afford, still better work will be accomplished. But to do so, money is wanted, so that the future depends upon the support given financially to the institution. The demands upon the treasury will be very great; the interest upon the new building must be paid; the annual payment of principal provided for, besides the current expenses for the maintenance of the Hospital. In addition there will be unusual expense in the furnishing and equipment of the new building.

Towards all this, we look for aid from friends and well-wishers—not necessarily only homœopathics, but all those who are interested in a good practical charity—and we feel assured that many only require their attention drawn to the merits of this institution to feel a deep interest in its success, and to betoken this interest by substantial subscriptions, and by earnest work.

C. A. BROWN,

Assistant Secretary.
