

ISMET PASHA ONE OF VON DER GOLTZ ABLEST PUPILS

A Professional Soldier, He Received Training at Potsdam—Still a Young Man.

General Ismet Pasha has been in command of the Western Turkish front since the spring of 1920, with his G. H. Q. at Ak-Shehr, about sixty miles east of Adana-Karabissar, on the Bagdad Railway. He is an Anatolian Turk, and like all the officers of the Turkish Nationalists army, is still a young man between forty and forty-five years old. From Kemal down, there are no high officers in the present Turkish army who may be accounted old. Ferial Pasha, Chief of the Turkish General Staff, is the oldest. He will never see fifty again.

Like Kemal Ismet is a professional soldier, but, unlike Kemal, he supplemented his course at the Turkish War Academy in Constantinople with a course at Potsdam in Germany, where he was one of von der Goltz's ablest pupils. He did not share the hatred for the Germans which made Kemal so unpopular at Constantinople during the war, possibly because he has been exclusively a soldier, and has never succumbed to that temptation to become a politician which played havoc with the careers of so many Turkish officers before the war, and which first broke and then made Kemal's career, says "C. P." in the Express.

Physique of Iron. Ismet has stuck to his trade from first to last. He is a slight figure of a man, rather frail in his left arm, but with a physique of iron, and a brain which has built up the western front out of practically nothing. He took command at Ak-Shehr when the Greeks were already well into the hinterland of Smyrna. In his rear at Angora, Kemal and Ferial Pasha were creating the Turkish army of today out of the dismantled artillery and demobilized troops which the armistice of 1918 had left them.

In the meantime Ismet had been given the task of holding up any further Greek advance until the army was ready to drive the Greeks back into the sea. He had a front of over 800 miles to cover, running in a great semi-circle from the Meander Valley in the south to the shores of the Sea of Marmara in the north.

Waiting Two Years. That was two years ago. For these two years Ismet has been engaged in sitting tight and waiting—probably as difficult a task as any soldier can be given.

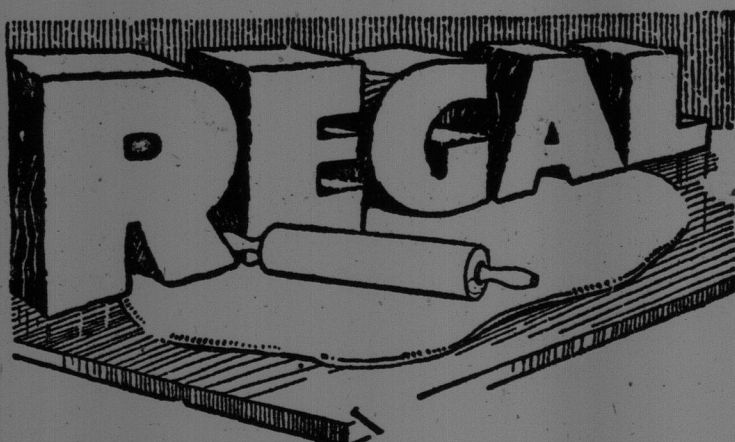

Some weeks ago the time had finally come when Kemal and Ferial were ready, and at dawn of August 28 last Ismet struck. The result of that Turkish offensive all the world knows. But Smyrna was not the ultimate objective. Ismet continued his advance towards Adrianople until the Turkish Nationalist government, under the leadership of Mustafa Kemal, was able to confer with the Allied general command in Constantinople to determine the terms of an armistice preliminary to a peace conference.

CAMPAIGN OPENS IN ST. STEPHEN

A large audience gathered in the parish hall of the Presbyterian church in St. Stephen on Monday evening when the St. Stephen Red Cross society presented an attractive programme as an opening of their membership campaign. Mrs. G. A. Kuhring was present and one of the spectacles of the Red Cross pageant was given, illustrating her address on the ideals and urgency of the Red Cross peace programme. In addition to this, the local society presented two beautiful tableaux, "The Greatest Mother in the World," and "Be Yours to Hold It High." Mrs. Ross, Mrs. N. Marie Mills and Miss Murray were the stage managers. L. Smith acted very ably as the Historian and the St. Croix orchestra played several delightful numbers. Walter deWolfe, president of the society, was in the chair. The platform was beautifully decorated with Red Cross peace programme has been taken up most enthusiastically in St. Stephen and there is every prospect of an eminently successful campaign there.

FEDERAL AID FOR RETURNED MEN

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 24.—Extension of the soldier settlement act to include provision for small land holdings, and sheltered employment for elderly returned men and those not 100 per cent. efficient, were among the re-establishment proposals discussed by the Dominion Veterans' Alliance at this morning's session.

A NOTABLE LIFE

Lady Georgiana Peel, Dead Recently, was in Close Touch With Prominent People of Victorian Age.

London, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press)—Lady Georgiana Peel, whose death occurred recently, the daughter of the famous prime minister, Lord John (afterwards Earl) Russell, knew intimately many of the great personages of the Victorian age. She remembered, as a little child, being taken into the dressing room of Queen Victoria and being danced around the room by the queen, then only a little more than twenty years of age, with her streaming all over her shoulders.

Lady Georgiana treasured several little things given her by Queen Victoria, whose marriage she could just remember. One was a China doll dressed in Chinese clothes.

She remembered, too, as a child of eleven, going over to Ireland with her father, to stay with the lord lieutenant. She went with her father to Vienna on the mission of peace after the Crimean War, and during his term of office, while they lived at Pembroke Lodge, given him by the queen, and in Chelsea Place, she met everyone of note at the time, including Dickens, Thackeray, Macaulay, Bright, Lord Brougham, Garibaldi, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, Longfellow, Tennyson, Melbourne and Clarendon.

Lady Georgiana's marriage to Archibald Peel, son of General and Lady Alice Peel, and nephew of Sir Robert Peel, was a union of Whig and Tory. After their marriage they lived chiefly in the country, and brought up a large family of children. After her husband's death, 1910, the king gave her the Cardinal's House in Hampton Court Palace as a residence.

Lady Georgiana was beloved by everyone who knew her for her clever, witty talk, her kindness, her charm, and above all, the never-failing gay courage with which she met all the incidents of life. She never showed depression, but was always glad to see her friends, and interested in all they had to say. She was the centre of a large and devoted family, both her own and her step-children, and for them, and for many of her friends, the blank she has left will never be filled.

MILK PRODUCED ON ROUGHAGE ALONE

Cow Under Test Gave 14-210 Pounds of Milk on Alfalfa Hay and Silage.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—A mature Holstein cow was pastured on irrigated, tame grass at the Department farm at Huntley, Montana. During the winter months she received nothing but corn silage and alfalfa hay. She was under test and was milked three times a day. For 140 days and 98 nights she was on pasture. During the rest of the year she consumed 9,014 pounds of alfalfa hay and 8,988 pounds of corn silage, a rather large amount of bulky feed. While this ration was fed the cow maintained her weight at practically what it was at the beginning of the test, and produced 14,210 pounds of milk and 470.24 pounds of butter fat. For the 12 months following the test, the same cow was milked three times a day and given, in addition to roughage, all the grain she would eat. The surprising fact is that she ate 7,056 pounds of grain and practically the same amount of roughage as before. The actual quantities of feed were 10,058 pounds of alfalfa hay, 8,228 pounds of silage and 4,230 pounds of beets. She was on pasture 180 days and no nights. The milk production for the year was 25,499.4 pounds and butter fat 823.11 pounds, and the gain in weight 200 pounds.

But notice the difference in the nutrients required to produce the product the first year and the second year, when 15 per cent. more butter fat was produced. The first year, over and above maintenance and in addition to pasture, the cow consumed for each 100 pounds of butter fat 156.37 pounds of digestible protein and 558.69 pounds of total digestible nutrients, and for each 1,000 pounds of milk yielded she used 51.7 pounds of digestible protein and 184.8 pounds of total digestible nutrients.

COUNTRY COUSIN.

English People Who Have Never Been to London.

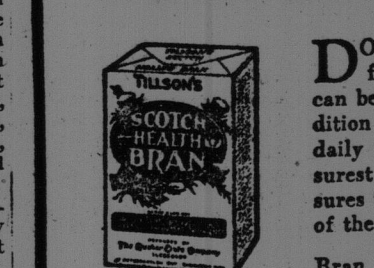

How many thousands of people are there living in the country who have never been to London? asks a correspondent of a London paper. Traveling through Worcester the other day, he writes, on a branch line of the Midland Railway, I got into conversation with an old man, very hale and hearty, of the agricultural type, who entered the train at a wayside station.

When I mentioned that I was traveling "up to town," he asked, "Which town?" and when, rather surprised at his query, I said "London," his look of mild interest caused me to ask him if he had ever been there.

"No, sir," he said, "I have never been farther than surrounding towns like Bristol, Gloucestershire and Cheltenham, and there are thousands like me in these parts."

"But wouldn't you like to go to London?" I asked. "Oh, I don't know," he replied. "If I did go, I daresay I should get lost, and anyway I am told it costs a heap of money to go and stay there."

A MESSAGE FROM OLD WORLD TO THE NEW

A Guide's Remark, But It Conveys a World of Meaning.

(Canadian Finance). Mrs. McWilliams, a worthy citizen of Winnipeg, recently returned from an extensive tour through Europe, and brought with her a timely message from the old world to the new. This message had its origin in the commonplace remark of an Italian guide. Marvelling at the wonderful buildings and scenic beauty of both the ancient and modern sections of the city of Rome, Mrs. McWilliams expressed her astonishment to her guide, and he replied in words which are worthy of admiration and emulation. "But we build for ever."

Canada is a new country, but it is a great country, because the fathers of confederation built for all time to come. The Canadians who fought in Flanders Field were great Canadians because they built for the future. The men who built the Canadian Pacific Railway were great men because they had a vision—a vision which came true. It was the thing that carried them on from near failure to success.

And yet all around us today we have men who live for today, who pay no heed to tomorrow, who imagine that individuals and nations can do great things in a day, who pronounce judgment on any project which cannot be completed in a year or so and deem it to failure.

"We build for ever." What a great objective for a young people. To the business man it means that he will give and demand a square deal—how else can he build a business that will stand the test of time? To our governments it means that every immigrant shall be a Canadian in the making—how else can we build a great nation? To our city fathers it means that they will courageously tackle civic problems with a view to the future—how else can they build a great city? To us, the citizens of the west, it means a wonderful opportunity to really make good. Surely, the "here today and gone tomorrow" idea has been played out. We are here to stay and our sons and daughters will succeed us. In all our undertakings we can profitably keep before us the words of the Italian guide, "We build for ever." Let us get as far away from the past as we can. Our forefathers had vision and built accordingly—we can and should do likewise.

BANDIT POSING AS SHERIFF

ROBS ALL CARS OF LIQUOR

Fort William, Ont., Oct. 23.—A modern Dick Turpin, who poses as a sheriff of Cook county, Minnesota, is operating on the Scott Highway, an automobile road connecting Fort William with Duluth. "With a congenial 'Sorry, folks, this is my duty,' the highwayman is reported to be relieving southbound cars of any liquor they might be taking back. He stops the cars with a gun. Provincial police on the Canadian side are on the lookout, while United States officials are searching the woods below Pigeon River bridge for the bandit who halts and searches cars "in the name of the United States government." So far as has been reported, he has not touched valuable excepting Canadian whiskey.
