Mrs. Winslow remains in Chatham a few days, then on to St. Chasles.

Are All Women Fretful? Quite an unnecessary question, because as many women have such poor complexions. We want to tell all women with pale, sallow cheeks about Ferronox, which quickly imparts fine color and gives the skin a clear, rich appearance. It's pore buster that makes fine complexion, so by producing less fat, it cleanses the skin, building up the debilitated system, increasing the circulation, Ferronox quickly brings the glow of health to faded cheeks. It's no trouble at all to beautify your locks—simply use Ferronox. Try it. Free 50c. ad. enclosed.

Death of Samuel Thomson, E. O. As we go to press the announcement is made that Samuel Thomson, Esq., K. C., the oldest barrister in the province, collapsed dead on the street in Newcastle, opposite the Dominion Church yesterday afternoon about three o'clock. Mr. Thomson was in his 80th year. He was 79 on 17th inst. He was Judge of Probate, Clerk of the County and Circuit Courts, Clerk of the Peace and Secretary of the County. He is survived by Mrs. Thomson and leaves eight children—five daughters and three sons. He was a prominent Presbyterian and a member of the Masonic order. No man in the county was better known or more universally esteemed.

Begetting the Question. A local paper states that a "Coy" has been made to have Principal Cox dismissed because he attended a conservative meeting. If any such cry has been made, we have not heard it, or, if it, until the paper referred to stated it. Such a demand would be unreasonable. Dr. Cox, or any other teacher, has the right to attend any political meeting, the same as any other citizen, and there would be no impropriety in his doing so. There has, however, been some adverse comment made on his appearance at such a meeting as a partisan political speaker. It is held by everybody—excepting, perhaps, the Doctor himself—that, as a matter of principle, he should not do this. The most thoughtful citizens of both parties agree that the principals of our public schools should not be active political partisans; that they should, so far as their public expression goes, be held aloof as between political parties. Otherwise, they might be the means of rousing their pupils into hostile political camps and thus divert their attention from their legitimate work and studies. Moreover, in Dr. Cox's case, it is only a few weeks since the same were induced to provide him with an assistant, on the ground that he had more work than he could properly attend to. It appears that he takes time to get notes for his party speeches, and, to that extent, loses the time, for which taxpayers of both parties pay him.

Public Banquet. A public banquet was given to Rev. M. A. O'Keefe, in Kerswell's Hall, Grand Falls, on 17th inst., when the reverend gentleman was presented with an address, which was accompanied by a purse of $300 in gold, which was handed to him on a gold and silver tray by one of the ladies of his late congregation, while a beautiful bouquet of flowers was presented by another. The address was as follows:—

To the Reverend M. A. O'Keefe, Pastor of the Assumption Church, Grand Falls, N. B.

Reverend Dear Father:—It is with deep sorrow and regret that your parishioners and friends learn of your intended departure from our midst. You, Reverend Father, have associated with, and been amongst us for more than twenty years, to all, you are endeared by the ties of affection, and your earlier years and strengthened by experience and long residence.

You are known and esteemed by all as a most amiable and energetic priest, a warm and ever-active friend of the poor, and a truly a sincere promoter of everything which had for its object the interests and honor of the Church, and welfare of the people.

We feel that we cannot let this opportunity pass without some tangible and worthy recognition of the heartfelt gratitude and love which we all have for you. We do this, we beg of you to accept the accompanying purse.

With a loving farewell and so loving your kind remembrance, hoping you may be enabled to return to the City and wish you success in your new field of labor. We have the honor to remain,

Your devoted and loving Parishioners and Friends, Grand Falls, N. B., Oct. 17th, 1904.

The above address was read by Mr. J. P. McElroy, and one in French was read by Dr. C. B. Sullivan.

Dr. C. B. Sullivan. Dr. C. B. Sullivan, M. D., is a member of the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto, and is a specialist in the treatment of the various diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat.

For a Stiff Neck. Or any stiffness in the muscles of the neck or any other part of the body, take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. It is the most powerful liniment made. "My neck was so stiff I couldn't turn it a quarter of an inch," writes Paul T. Baldwin of Portsmouth, N. H. "I had a stiff neck for several weeks and all the doctors and nurses I consulted. I don't know another liniment you can depend on like Nervilox. It's splendid for colds, rheumatism, and for the pain in the neck and back." Try Nervilox yourself. Price 25c.

Mr. James Kelly of Loggville has a Serious Accident in St. John. The St. John Telegraph of Friday says: "The remains and fragments of a small boy had the 'foot of bridging to road' street car No. 35 on the Paradise Row line about 7 o'clock last evening. 'Jedged in the rear' driver was found on a narrow gauge car which subsequently turned out to be James Kelly, but it could not be determined whether or not his home is in this city.

When found he was taken to the hospital and required consciousness at 10.45 o'clock, but was too dead to give any version of his experience. When first brought in he was examined by the resident physician, but no external wounds were found; it was thought his condition was possibly due to electric shock but the street railway people were unable to see how this could have happened.

The conductor of the car was asked to tell what he knew of the occurrence but declined to tell anything. From another source it was learned that Kelly was standing near the rear of the car when it started and after the car started ran round to the blind side and attempted to get aboard. As he persisted, his position became dangerous for the car was immovably increasing its speed. A spectator attempted to extricate it but found he could do so, and was obliged to see the car go round the bend with Kelly still visible somewhere around the feeder.

When in the neighborhood of West street corner the conductor and motorman were told by boys at what they had seen, Kelly was found and lifted from the feeder and carried into Wade's drug store. He was totally unconscious.

Dr. Wm. Christie, Jr., was summoned and he was by his advice that the ambulance was sent for and in it Kelly was conveyed to the hospital.

Nobody knew him, but in his pocket was found a paper bearing the name of James Kelly, and a couple of railway tickets, one from Bangor to this city.

The lady who saw him first on the feeder said that electricity had something to do with his loss of consciousness for that she saw light blue flashes played from time to time about his body.

The Globe says Kelly's injuries are not serious; that he was found from Loggville to Bangor and that the railway people ridicule the idea that he received any electric shock while on the feeder.

The Laboring Men's Treatment. In a speech made last week at Moncton, Mr. H. J. Logan, the efficient representative of Cumberland, N. B., compared the treatment of the laboring classes by the late and the present Dominion Governments. He said: "During the past seven years I have served in parliament I have endeavored to be a friend at Ottawa, and everywhere else, to the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. My bringing up led me to respect the man who works for a living, the man who works one, and perhaps two, hours daily more than he ought to work, and I believe that a man should receive a fair day's wage for a fair day's work. (Cheers.)"

It has been my lot to stand beside Henry Emerson, the friend of the laborer in Canada, and fight for the rights and privileges of the working men. I want the friendship of the working men."

"Like the history of labor legislation in Canada, I challenge the conservative press to point out one single spot where, during the eighteen years of conservative rule, anything was done along the lines of labor legislation, except the creation of Labor Day, and the imposition of a tax of $50 a year on chimney."

(Laughter.) The conservative came in power in 1878. The I. C. R. trackmen, men who worked hard, long hours—the boiler the sun the ladder the work, the worse the more the heat for the work, men who have to be tried in that profession—four years after the National Policy came into force, were receiving ninety cents per day. On the eve of the election in 1882, the conservative party saw that another must be done, and 'trickily' raised it to $1 per day, and remained in power for fourteen years longer, going out paying $1.15 to their workmen."

"The liberal party came into power in 1896. They have given, in the seven years of power, three increases for the wages of the I. C. R. trackmen. Today a trackman in Moncton who received $1.60 to $1.65 in 1896 is now receiving $2.25 per day. The trackman and the maintenance of way men, who in 1896 received $1.15, are today receiving $1.60. (Cheers.)"

"In 1887 the conservative party were on the eve of a general election, and saw that something must be done in regard to the working men, and the betterment of the condition of labor, and they put up a little bluff. They sent out a labor commission, who, four years later, on the eve of another general election, reported that there was no such system, but after the liberals went into power Mr. McKenney King reported that power was working in Moncton on army uniforms for less than twenty-five cents a day.

"In 1896 we had against us the Alien Labor Law of the United States. Canadians could not go to work in the United States, but after 1896 we had an alien labor law, copied exactly as that of the United States."

The conservative party had a $30 tax upon Chinese. Within the same year the conservatives passed the repeal and protest of the railway corporations, the tax was doubled and made $100, and then, to the request of the working men, raised to $500, and that same parliament has done the same to the border again. (Laughter and Cheers.)

"Then the liberal government passed a conciliatory bill by which some of the greatest strikes in Canada were settled. Then they also established by the Department of Labor at Ottawa, one of the most advanced in the world."

"Then this government passed a fair wage law which would employ what labor he liked, black, white, or yellow, and pay what wages he pleased. Certain sections of the fair wage schedule could not be contracted by any party of parliament. (Applause.) We established the Labor Gazette, the labor paper of Canada, giving the best information to be secured about labor."

Mon. Mr. Blair's Resignation. The most sensible and unprejudiced article we have seen on the subject of Mr. Blair's resignation, is that published in the chairmanship of the Dominion Railway Commission is that of the Montreal Witness, which is one of the really independent newspapers of the Dominion. The Witness, on the day following the announcement by Mr. Blair, said: "Mr. Blair's resignation of the chairmanship of the R. W. L. Commission, after less than a year's service, and in the midst of a political campaign, has naturally excited a sensation throughout the country. Mr. Blair's reasons, formally stated before the commission, is that he is in the way to better his position. There is some shade of mystery about this statement. Mr. Blair tells his fellow commissioners and the country that he accepted a place on the commission with many misgivings, and that the misgivings, which he started had been intensified instead of removed. These misgivings, whose source is not explained, are not due to aversion to the task, which is highly congenial or unbusinesslike. The fact of the commission is a child of his own, and has done everything excellently under his guidance. They do not refer to his relations with it or with the government, for he says: 'I do not wish to impute a fault to any one whatever; I find fault. I am reaching the conclusion that I have arrived at purely for reasons that are personal to myself.' We have further light, however, in his despatch to the 'Evening Times,' where David Russell's own Opposition paper, which says: 'I authorize the announcement that I have resigned my position as chairman of the R. W. L. Commission, and have notified the Premier that beyond the re-iteration of my strong objection to the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme, I have no present intention of re-entering public life.' This hint at reaffirming his objections goes as though the whole Conservative press may not be without inside knowledge when it goes with delight over the accession of Mr. Blair to their campaigning strength. We do not yet know what the splendid precedent in which has tempted Mr. Blair to throw up congenial service at this critical juncture, but apart from that we cannot but think that Mr. Blair has advised himself badly, or that he has been very ill advised."

"Mr. Blair's criticism of the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill, last year, was a admirable piece of work, and expressed views which were largely our own. We have long been convinced that the extension of the International to the Great Lakes would be wise, and an even necessary for the welfare of that road. Because of this conviction, we advocated the purchase of the Canada Atlantic by the government, so soon as we learned that it was in the market, and we were disappointed when the opportunity was lost, and that railway fell into the hands of the Grand Trunk. But while Mr. Blair in the telling criticism he made of the government's railway policy doubted the government's ability to buy and operate the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill, he also supplied the Opposition with all its ammunition against the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme, he did not disdain, a little later, to accept an appointment in the gift of his late colleagues worth ten thousand a year, and making and living expenses to boot, and ten years' tenure of office. Whatever else may be said by way of approval or disapproval of Mr. Blair's acceptance of this office, it is clear that it put it out of his power to criticize the government's railway policy. If the contents of the bill is committed to it, by the solemn act of parliament, having a still more lucrative position open to him, which he cannot refuse, he finds himself free for the reaffirming of his strong criticism of the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme. According to the Opposition organs, he is immediately going on the stump to denounce the government's railway policy and his telegram to St. John suggests that he is going to do something active in the matter. Certainly his resignation is timed well to suit the Opposition and his telegram is a gift for their mill."

"Nevertheless, the Opposition is in a somewhat ludicrous position, so far as its railway policy is concerned. Mr. Blair, in his advocacy of public ownership of the new transcontinental line, is in much the same position as was Mr. D'Arroll when he advocated the Reform Bill of 1867, so as to 'dash the hopes' of the Tories of that time, the Reform Bill was a bitter, bitter pill; but they swallowed it so as to get back to power. Our party of privilege, too, finds the advocacy of public ownership, and socialist propaganda, a very bitter pill. Indeed, some of the supporters of the Opposition financially have protested against public ownership and all its works. Whether they will swallow the pill or not remains to be seen if precedent is taken for a guide, they will. But with all the good will in the world to those who have done well for themselves, Mr. Blair and his friends, if they were returned to power, could do very little. 'What I have said, I have said,' Mr. Chamberlain told the world on a memorable occasion, and the present government may, with equal truth, say, 'We have done what we have done.' The Conservative press is talking of the resignation of Mr. Blair being the death knell of the Grand Trunk Pacific contract, but this implies too much. The contract is entered into by the Government, and the Government and Parliament are bound to it. Repudiation and cancellation are too expensive a luxury for the country to indulge in."

position of any organic matter remaining. If farmers once took time to think of matters, there would undoubtedly be a great improvement. Windmills are now both cheap and common, and there is no reason why well-to-do farmers should not have a water system in their houses, with all the conveniences and advantages which residents in the cities enjoy from the water works systems there established. Though not quite so convenient, the dry earth closet is a cheap and satisfactory from the sanitary point of view that no farmer can discover a reasonable excuse for refusing to adopt it. A well laid cement concrete floor will be found by far the easiest to keep in a clean and wholesome condition. A neat box of suitable size, mounted on runners, and with a strong hook at one end to which a horse may be attached, makes a receptacle that can be conveniently drawn to the field or yard to be emptied. This box may be made wholly or in part of sheet iron, or if the bottom be semi-circular in form a kittle of hot water would be found sufficient to loosen the frozen contents in winter. Galvanized iron buckets, larger at the top than at the bottom, are also easy to empty in winter. The nature of the receptacle is largely a matter of convenience; the essential features of the system are the stowing and use of a plentiful supply of dry earth and the emptying of the receptacle regularly. If the contents be spread thinly over the surface of a field, they will be decomposed in a very few days with no danger to the public health. Asches should not be used as a substitute for earth, and should not be used in the garden that has been frequently cultivated but be found just the thing. If a little coarse or lumpy it may be run through a gravel screen. It is always advisable to keep a good supply on hand, as it becomes drier and better with age when stored in a bin. If the man who has hitherto been careless in this particular will adopt and maintain a proper sanitary system in connection with his earth closet, he will find himself getting largely, not only in self respect, but in the respect of his family and of the strangers within a gate. Furthermore, he may thereby escape the ravages of such diseases as typhoid fever, which are so frequently traced to the use of contaminated water.
