Suitability.

Did you ever say a word over until it sounds as if you had made it up and there never had been such a word in the language before? G. E. Chesterton writes something like that about if you say a common word like "dog" over a hundred times it will grow into something as uncommon as a leviathan. (I quote from memory.) Well, that was how I felt about "suitability," but what I mean is the proper thing at the proper time, and particularly the proper clothes. An article in the Ladies Field of recent date has a paragraph on this subject. It states that the girl who goes home late from her work dressed in a neat suit, will probably be quite untested, while the maiden in the striped muslin with short skirts and conspicuous boots, has only her attire to blame if she received undesirable attention.

A business man told me of a young lady who applied to him for a position in his store. It was a foggy day, and the applicant was dressed in a frilly muslin and a fly-away hair. She didn't get the position, for while she may have been trying to look her best, the impression she made was most unfavorable. A dark or plain suit with a shirtwaist would have looked more like business.

Of course clothes that are either dowdy or untidy would not come under the class of suitable. An unattractive aspect tells greatly against one.

One should not judge altogether by clothes, you may say, but it is only by the outward appearance that a stranger can judge. Wear clothes that are appropriate for the occasion. It is the best plan.

WOMEN'S WORK

Talent Money.
It may not count up to such a large amount in dollars and cents, but it will be probably be millions in a book where money is reckoned at its real value.

It isn't a present unless it hurts you to give it says a modern writer, and this money I am going to tell about cost time and thought, and in many cases meant real sacrifice.

You see a man out of his regular income can just put his hand into his pocket to give to Patriotic causes and while he does without some luxury or necessity he does not have to think where the money is to come from. But with most of our women it is different, the money they are giving them is earning themselves in original ways.

The various chapters of the Daughters of the Empire in St. John, have nearly all promised, in the summer months, to earn what is called Talent money. This means taking, say one dollar and out of that one dollar making five theoretically, but in many cases the start is made with no capital whatever.

There are some of the ways the sum has been gained:

One "Daughter" has taken in washing, that is she has done up, for her busy friends, their fine blouses. Another has pressed suits of clothes. Another of a mechanical turn acted as chauffeur so many afternoons a week, still others whitened the tapes on the someone who needs it, but after all there has to be some sacrifice and perhaps that is the one demanded of those who formerly did the work. There is work to do for all who can do it and it is not likely that the raising of Talent Money will interfere seriously with anyone.

FASHION NOTES

Boas and capes of ostrich feathers, in all colors, are becoming very popular.

Worsted silk ball fringe and chenille fringe are new as a trimming on hats and for the finishing off of skirts.

Skirts are slightly longer, and many feature the bustle. The newest skirts have nine or eleven gores.

The fullness in many skirts and waists is laid in cartridge pleats.

New taffeta blouses are worn outside of the skirt, and reach to the knee. They are close-fitting, with a row of buttons down the front. Blouses on the base order, with fitted back and "darted" fronts, are noted. Dark colors predominate.

Braid is being used extensively on separate coats and suit coats.

White underwear embroidered in colors is new.

An increased use of boning is noted in the new corsets.

Metal designs are seen on the new, latest gowns, being the most popular metal used.

The newest shoe has a black patent leather toe and an upper of gray glazed kid.

Some Book Notes.

There was long regret in Canada over the announcement of the death in London of Miss S. Macnaughton, author of the "Fortune of Christina MacNaughton," "A Lame Dog's Diary," and several other successful stories. Her last book, "A Woman's Diary of the War," appeared some months ago and told of her experiences as a hospital orderly in Antwerp, Flanders and other places. In the latter place she established a soup kitchen which became almost famous. Her work earned for her the Order of Leopold of Belgium.

Later she went to Russia and under her pen name of "The Red Cross Soldier's Comforts" Association in many a "shop" where you may purchase garden produce (vegetables or flowers) cake, rolls or jam and pickles. Stained berry boxes filled with ferns brought in quite a good sum at one of these fairs.

It may strike the thoughtful person that maybe some of these patriotic endeavors are taking work away from

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS.

Uncle Dick wishes many happy returns to the following kiddie, who is celebrating her birthday today:
Audrey Waddell, Reed's Point.

Letter of Appreciation.

St. John, N. B.

Dear Uncle Dick:—
It was a surprise for me to read in Saturday's Standard that my drawing was the best. It was not my biggest surprise though, that came when I saw the great big beautiful doll you and for me. I am more than delighted and have named her Audrey. I am sure the Children's Room is proving a good success. I guess its because we all think so much of you. Thanking you very, very much for Audrey.
Your loving niece,
Audrey.

Writes Nice Letter.

St. John, N. B.

Dear Uncle Dick:—
I now get down to write you a few lines to let you know that I am well, and I hope you are the same. I am trying the contest. I hope I will win a prize. I am sending you some drawing, write and tell me what you think about my drawing. My little brother Cecil and I have written a letter to you. I have named her Audrey. I am sure the Children's Room is proving a good success. I guess its because we all think so much of you. Thanking you very, very much for Audrey.
Your loving niece,
Audrey.

From One Who Enjoys Corner.

I did not send in the last story, as I knew girls who had learnt it at school so thought there was no need of me trying, but I colored them all. This has been long work, and I hope I get some of it. I will soon be time for me to go back to school at the Sacred Heart Convent, at Saint Anne Rectory. I will try the drawing.
One who enjoys the Corner.
Mary Groat.

Tried to Get Watch.

I seen your contest in the St. John Standard, and thought I would try and get the watch. I am thirteen years old and will be fourteen on October the 4th.
Yours truly,
Fred McVicar.

What a Great Time!

264 Prince Wm. St.

Dear Uncle Dick:—

It is a great joy to look forward to a week on the farm, but it proved quite up to our hopes. Were you ever where you could have all the strawberries and cream your heart could wish? This was one of our joys. We learned a lot about how things grow, milking the cows, the care of the milk, churning the cream and making butter. We saw the flocks of snow white sheep and lambs. Horses with their coats, calves and lot of little pigs. I think July is the best time to go to the country, everything seems to be growing and it is thirteen years old makes a difference when you can visit a kind uncle and aunt and a good bunch of boy cousins who do all they can to give you a good time. I wish you could have spent a day with us. I am sure you would be made at home. I may not win a camera with the letter, but I would like to have had one with me on my trip. Adieu same jobs in seeing you.
From your loving niece,
Eileen.

Who's Who and What's What in the Picture World and on the Stage—Favorites and What They Say and Do.

IMPERIAL.

The Man Behind the Curtain.
The Man of Mystery he was but he was tracked to his lair and run to earth by the help of Lillian Walker as "Edna Hall," who dressed in man's attire in which she presents a very striking appearance, and with her droll play coming and going in her cheeks is the star of this play at the Imperial.

The Imperial had a full house yesterday afternoon and the faithful followers of "Peg" greeted every sight of the hero of this "Mystery" play with loud applause. The story holds one's interest throughout. The mystery is not the main theme of the story; it is rather the heroine's struggle with the suspicion which falls upon her that forms the central idea of the story. The scenes are laid in some country place near the sea, a very pretty location and lovely cloud effects and sun rises are introduced.

C. J. Van Deusen directed the production and the story is by Minnie Krakauer. Ervart Overton plays the leading male part well and the heavy role is rendered effectively by William Dunn. Templer Saxe is the butler and John Costello as Mr. Stanhope completes the cast. The settings are good and so, too, is the photography.

Lillian Walker will be remembered for her fine work in "A Pair of Silk Stockings."

Peg o' the Ring.

Peg re-appeared carried in by an elephant and with her filmy draperies considerably dishevelled. The adventures have reached their eleventh episode.

Miss Ruth Blaisdell delighted yesterday's audience at the Imperial with her soprano voice singing "Undi," and "The Bubble." She is a Boston singer who has been filling a church engagement in Charlestown, P. E. I. and consented to stay off in St. John before returning to Boston.

UNIQUE.

"Don Caesar de Bazan."

Long years ago in old Madrid, as the famous sentimental song says, there lived a king and a queen, a prime minister, Don Jose, a Gypsy "Mark," and a girl, Don Caesar de Bazan, rather like the gentleman in "The Mikado" who announces "A wondering minstrel I."

A thing of shreds and patches" as far as his dress is concerned. These personages move through very pretty scenes which one could easily believe were really Spanish. The settings are excellent, and the story of the little dancer "Martina" and the gentleman adventurer, Don Caesar, the wickedness of Don Jose and the troubles in the royal household make a good picture-play.

Don Caesar is a Kalem photo-drama, taken from the well-known play of the same name. The principals were Alice Hollister and G. Lawson Butt.

LYRIC.

"Dust."

"Less than the dust beneath thy chair wheels," was the attitude of the Hindoo lover, but it was a "less" than dust beneath her motor tires" that Marion, a wealthy society girl regarded the poor. This is a very good picture, showing public charity and private selfishness, though to make the lesson strong the author has over-drawn a little. For the honor of womanhood I must say I can't believe any woman would leave a dying girl when she felt she could save the girl's life by staying. The Belgian Relief entertainment is splendidly staged, in fact the whole play is excellent. The picture of the factory accident is almost too vivid, and you are pleased when the bill to protect workmen in factories is passed by the government.

The factory details seem to me to be most minutely photographed. The fire in the woolen mills causes great excitement, and the hero does some thrilling rope-climbing to try to rescue Marion's father, the mill owner.

Marion learns there is another sort of charity besides taking part in public entertainments, good as that is, and we leave the lovers re-united.

Gangler's Dogs.

On the curtain rising at the Lyric yesterday afternoon we saw, sitting quietly under seven illuminated umbrellas seven little dogs. These are Gangler's dogs—three French toy poodles, three spits and a black poodle who perform very cleverly at their master's command all sorts of tricks. I went behind the scenes and was formally introduced to "Smith," the star performer, who gravely shook hands with me and said she was glad to meet a person with the good taste to like dogs. This poodle, two years ago, in San Francisco broke the world's record by walking six blocks and 32 yards on her hind legs. This is a very bright little act and has little bits of comedy to amuse. It was well received by yesterday's audiences and especially enjoyed by the children.

Another picture at the Unique was "The Curfew at Simpat Corner," a Vitaphone rural drama.

"The Making Over of Mrs. Matt"—May Robson at the Opera House.

"I never could remember whether to begin from the spoons in or the forks out." This was one of the many problems which beset Mrs. Matt in her endeavors to turn herself into a society success who would do credit to her wealthy husband and above all to her college-bred son.

It must have been the almost unanimous verdict of the large audience at the Opera House last evening that "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt," is one of the best stage productions seen in St. John for some years. The only play with which to compare it is "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." That was funny and pathetic, too, but the later play has more of a personal appeal for Mrs. Matt's love for her "boy, Junior," is one of the sweetest things in the story. She loves her husband too, and manages him in a good old-fashioned way which came to her by nature. The reason people who saw the play laughed and cried was because Mrs. Matt was so human and natural. She submitted meekly to the eminently proper maid in order to obtain a conventional figure and style. She claimed to have horse sense but she proved to have mother wit and womanly intuition in a high degree, and a glorious sense of humor. She got up crying and then she made you laugh as when telling her son how she had longed for him she said: "My pillow was with tears and Holt's cold cream." There is no space to quote any more of the witty things but the play scintillates with them and the audience did not dare applaud for fear of missing the next good joke.

It was not a cold audience, however, for the applause was frequent and the welcome Miss Robson received showed her she had many admirers in St. John as elsewhere. Her support was excellent, each member of the company being admirable in their part.

The company is particularly well balanced. "Junior," played by Jack Storey, had the most to do (next to Miss Robson), and he did the impetuous boy remarkably well. The scenery was good, especially the one room of the twenty-two at "The Hut."

The cast was as follows:
Characters.
(Arranged in the order in which they appear.)
Holt, Maid to Mrs. Lamson—Edith Conrad.
Bell Boy at the Hotel St. Beris—John Rowe.
Mathew Lamson, a Western Financier, now a power in Wall Street—Burr Carruth.
Junior Lamson, his son—Jack Storey.
Emily Lamson—Miss May Robson.
Charlotte Avery, a Young Society Girl—Ridley Davies.
Rev. Budthorpe Barrett, a chum of Junior's—Cy. Weaver.
Mary Lawrence, Secretary to Mathew Lamson—Elizabeth Warren.
Judson, a Butler—Chester Manser.
Bennett, a Chauffeur—Fred Glenn.
Florence, a Waitress at the Inn—Marie Pavey.
Constable—John Rowe.

Synopsis.
Act 1—The Lamson Apartment at the St. Beris Hotel, New York City. Eleven o'clock of a morning in May. (Six weeks elapse.)
Act 2—The Library of "The Hut." Nine o'clock on an evening in July.
Act 3—Parlor of a small inn, near New Haven. Seven o'clock the following morning.

Blanche Ring in "Broadway and Buttermilk" at Maxine Elliott.
Blanche Ring is on the second week of her engagement at the Maxine Elliott Theatre. Willard Mack's new comedy, with its contrasted characters of city and country life has caught the popular fancy, and the role of Jane O'Day, the New York milliner gives Miss Ring the best opportunities to show the versatility of her talent of any character in which she has been seen. Helen Lowell, William P. Carlton, Calvin Thomas, Tommy Meade, Charles Withers, Fayette Perry, Josephine Morse and other members of the cast have roles that are cleverly drawn and excellently acted. Miss Ring's songs are likely to become as popular as others who owe their fame to the fact that she was the first to sing them.
