SEPTEMBER.—A writer on the management of Bees says: "Now is the time to feed bees, and not wait until winter. It is bad policy to disturb bees during the winter. A syrup made of common sugar will answer for feed where honey cannot be had; white sugar is equally as good as honey. All stocks that are fed should be carefully guarded against robbers by contracting the entrance, so that a bee or two can only pass at a time. All queenless stocks should now be taken up, or supplied with a queen. Stocks in common hives that are to be taken up should be attended to now, as they will add no more to their stores. Moveable-comb hives may be examined, and if miller grubs are found in the combs, they should be removed.
