WELCOME FOR REV. FATHER MINEHAN.

Rev. Father Minehan, pastor of St. Peter's, was accorded a loyal welcome by his people on his return last week from Europe. During his absence his home had been renovated and re-furnished by the parishioners, the work being artistically done, the furnishing of the dining-room in particular being especially handsome. On Thursday evening an informal reception was held in the old hall, when many personally welcomed their Pastor, and Father Minehan gave some interesting notes on his travels. On Sunday evening the congregation were thanked by their Pastor for their thought of him during his absence and on many other occasions, the conclusion being the bestowal of the blessing which he had brought them direct from the Holy Father.

REV. FATHER PISANI SAYS FAREWELL.

On Sunday Rev. Father Pisani, who had been an interested worker in the cause of his countrymen for some months past in Canada, preached both morning and evening at St. John's chapel. Amongst other things the Rev. speaker exhorted his hearers to be true to the national religion of their ancestors and to the traditions of their forefathers. The choir, under the direction of Mr. S. Castrucci, gave some special music in an excellent manner. On Monday evening Father Pisani was presented by the choir with a travelling clock, and later was accompanied to the station by a large number, who regretfully bade him good-bye on his return journey to Italy.

O'CONNOR-KERNAHAN.

At St. Basil's church, on Wednesday, September 30th, the marriage of Miss Anna Kernahan, daughter of Mrs. James Kernahan of 33 Wellesley street, and Mr. William O'Connor, Government Inspector of Neglected and Dependent Children, took place, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Father Gregory Kernahan, brother of the bride, assisted by Rev. M. V. Kelly, C.S.B., pastor of St. Basil's.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss J. Kernahan, and Mr. H. B. Ferguson supported the groom. At the conclusion of the nuptial Mass a large number of relatives and invited guests were entertained at the home of the bride's mother. Mr. O'Connor, who is well known and everywhere respected throughout Ontario, is, together with his amiable wife, accompanied in their new life by the good wishes of many sincere friends.

FEAST OF ST. FRANCIS CELEBRATED.

On Sunday, the Feast of St. Francis of Assisi, was celebrated with special fervor by the people of St. Francis' parish. At the early Mass it seemed as if almost the entire congregation approached Holy Communion. Rev. Father Murray, C.S.B., the celebrant, commented on the large number present and exhorted the congregation to continue their devotion to the Blessed Sacrament. titular saint of the parish. In the evening the church was particularly bright and festive, the altars being especially beautiful, and the singing exceptionally good. Rev. Father O'Malley of the Cathedral preached eloquently on the life of St. Francis, giving a sketch of his time and dwelling on the modern cult which has aroused so much enthusiasm in his regard amongst those outside the Church. The evening closed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, given by the pastor, Rev. W. A. McCann.

DEATH OF MRS. COLIN L. WRIGHT.

Word has just been received of the death of Mrs. Colin L. Wright, of St. Louis, Mo., daughter of Mrs. Isabella Griffith, Toronto. The deceased lady was known to many in this city, where for some time she was a student at Loretto Abbey and where she was married a few years ago by Rev. Father Rohleder of the Cathedral. The death call was very sudden, as half an hour before the end Mr. Wright had left his wife without any thought of danger. A hemorrhage of the brain was the fatal messenger of death.

The gentleness and amiability of the deceased had endeared her to a large circle of acquaintances and her unlooked-for death caused regret to many both in St. Louis and Toronto. Mrs. Wright is survived by her husband and three children, the eldest two years and eight months, and a baby girl five days old, by her mother, Mrs. Griffith, and sister, Miss N. Griffith of Toronto, two brothers in Oklahoma and two sisters and a brother in St. Louis, all of whom were in attendance at the funeral. May she rest in peace.

COMMUNICATION

Editor Catholic Register: On my return trip from Europe, just as Father Point was reached, a copy of a Canadian paper found its way into my hands. I was delighted to get hold of a home journal after a separation of over two months' duration. Very soon, however, my delight gave way to indignation, for on the first page an extract was paraded, making a vile and venomous attack on Charles Murphy, just appointed a member of the Laurier Cabinet. The appointment was denounced as the work of a few contractors whose nominee Mr. Murphy was. It was not enough to vilify Charles Murphy. An attack was made on any Catholic paper that dared to write a word of congratulation over his appointment, "the reptile Catholic press" being the choice terms applied to them by their worthy journalistic confrere.

As reason for my interest in the matter, let me say that I was a member of a deputation that some months ago urged on the Dominion Premier the name of Charles Murphy as one eminently fitted for a Cabinet position. This deputation embraced veteran Canadian Senators and men of standing in professional and business life from various and widely-apart Ontario centres. It was as representative a deputation as the Premier received for many a day, and would have been four times as large had its number not being limited at the suggestion of the Premier himself. I was not there at the invitation or suggestion of any contractor, and the only contract I ever undertook in my life was that of applying quicklime to certain nuisances, "Catholic" and otherwise, whose offensiveness made such work imperative.

What I can say of myself I think I can assert of my confreres on that occasion. We were there at our own expense because we regarded Charles Murphy as the best available man to obtain for us that influence in the direction of affairs and that even-handed justice to which our people are entitled. More than that we do not ask or want. And we will be very much surprised if before many months Charles Murphy does not on the platform and at the desk prove himself well worthy of the position, on the attainment of which we offer him our warmest congratulations. The article in question I regard as a vile, personal attack and as such I have dealt with it. L. MINEHAN.

LONDON'S CATHOLICITY (Continued from page 1) and the Papal Legate standing on the steps of the Archbishop's throne, imparted to all who had taken part in the Congress, the Apostolic Benediction, to which is attached a plenary indulgence. Then that marvellous procession of Churchmen, recalling some Council of the Church in the days of faith, passed down the steps and back into the vast Sacristies of the Cathedral. In the three hours which elapsed before the Procession set forth from the Cathedral, one was enabled by the courtesy of the authorities to see something of the line of route and the crowds from various points, being provided with special passes, which gave entrance through the cordon of police, horse and foot, drawn across each thoroughfare to prevent any further crush of people in an already impenetrable crowd. Many of the houses were decorated, notably the Convent of St. Vincent de Paul in Carlyle Place, which was festooned with flowers that formed a triumphal archway across the thoroughfare, while crimson draperies bore the words of the Benediction hymns in letters of gold. It was interesting, too, to note the various groups which had begun to gather under the banner of their respective missions, to each of which had been allotted a fixed point on the line of route. Thus we passed the Lithuanian Church, the Birmingham contingent, the various London missions, rich and poor, and a splendid group of French Catholics standing beneath a magnificent silken tricolor, and singing in their na-hundreds of altar servers, the brothers of the little Oratory, and of the Servite Church, and so large was this guard, that word went forth that the Catholic men of the different parishes were not to fall in, for the procession nearly filled up the mile of route from end to end in its present form. But the end was not yet. There was a final scene, for which fifty thousand people had been waiting patiently some hours, taking up their stand in any available corner, which commanded a view of the balcony on the roof of the Cathedral. Viewed from above the great door, the crowd presented a marvellous spectacle. Swaying backwards and forwards like the waves of a troubled sea, the side streets, Ashley Place, and away into Victoria street, were to be seen nothing but a mass of uplifted faces. Double cordons of police linked arm in arm, could scarcely keep the square space in front of the Cathedral, which was soon to be filled also to overflowing by the returning processions, numbers of whom could not gain admission to the Cathedral. Here again hymns were sung, to give place to shouts and vivas on the return of the Cardinal Legate. Then suddenly a prolonged "Hush" which passed across the waiting crowd and subdued their struggles and disconnected hymns. Then a great blare of trumpets suddenly rent the air and was echoed from the height of the great campanile, and re-echoed from the surrounding thoroughfares. Then a voice falling from above with the two clear, ringing words, "Tantum Ergo." Everybody knew that. Priest and layman, Italian, Spaniard, Briton, American, Pole, Indian, Frenchman, German, Belgian, all took up the strain in perfect unison, and one felt the magic of the words: Sensuum defectus. "Prestet fides supplementum. As the last note died away, the figure of Cardinal Vanuttelli, bearing in his hands the monstrance of solid gold set with gems which some unknown donor presented to the Cathedral, and which now enshrined the Blessed Sacrament, appeared on the crimson platform far above. All who could, knelt, but the press was so thick, and those who could not, reverently bowed their heads, or lifted them to gaze upon their Sacred God, as was the custom of their land. Thrice was the Benediction given, to the east, to the west, and upon the multitude beneath and then as Cardinal Vanuttelli descended, the silence which had fallen completely upon the sunlit streets of London, upon the crowded roofs, and the windows where knelt nuns and ladies with lighted tapers, was broken by a mighty shout that rose and fell and rose again. The people were cheering the Blessed Sacrament—and who shall blame them, surely not the God who gave them voices with which to praise Him. And after Him they cheered the Cardinal, the Church, their guests, the Archbishops and bishops, and priests, and to the sound of that note of jubilation the Cardinal Legate and his attendants passed down the winding turret stair to the waiting procession which filled both aisles of the Cathedral and in the growing dust looked like an endless Rosary of light, as bishops and priests bearing their lighted tapers wended their solemn way back to the High Altar where the Te Deum was sung and the last Benediction given. So ended the Eucharistic Congress of 1908, though its echoes are still lingering in the air, and may creep into other of my London letters in the days to come. PILORIM.
