TO OUR CUSTOMERS.

We have just put in, at great expense, a WONDERFUL MACHINE, heated by steam, working off passing through the rollers once; the result—WORK IS ELASTIC, WILL NOT BREAK, and will last much longer than when ironed by the old method, heated by gas, which has to pass through the rollers eight times.
P.S.—We have also added a newly invented machine to iron the edges of Collars and Cuffs.

A PARISIAN BEAUTY.

MME. TALLIEN, WHO, IT IS ASSURED, STUBBED NAPOLEON.

A Woman Whose Entrancing Loveliness Dazzled Even the Women of the French Capital—The Mild and Inoffensive Young Bonaparte.

During the directorate Marie de Medici's palace became the center of government and Barras reigned there under the inspiration of Mme. Tallien. It was she who organized all the fetes and ceremonies which calmed Paris after the Terror. In 1796 the beautiful Spandard was twenty-three and had already had an eventful past. The daughter of a financier named Cabarrus, she had married at the age of sixteen the Marquis de Fontenay, been divorced from him in 1793 and had remarried, a few months after, Tallien, the conventionist.

Arrested May 22, 1794, she was imprisoned in Les Carmes, and it was from here that she wrote the stinging epistles to her husband which induced that wavering spirit to dare all in the attempt to set her free. Armed with a dagger in case of failure and all the courage he could muster, Tallien on the famous 8th Thermidor attacked Robespierre in a debate which brought about the fall of the "sea-green monster."

The reign of terror came to an end, the prisons disgorged their victims, and Mme. Tallien received from the people the title of Notre Dame de Thermidor. The world was at her feet, and she dazzled it by her beauty and her charm, her lovers and her luxury. Even women forgot to be jealous and acknowledged what all men proclaimed. The following description is from the pen of one of her own sex, Mme. de Chastelay:

"Mme. Tallien came every day to visit Barras. I do not think it possible to be lovelier than this woman was then. I shall always see her like a fairy queen among the rest, her beautiful black hair coiled simply on her head without any ornament, round her neck a single string of large pearls. She wore a white underdress and tunic of ink crepe, and, sitting on the ground playing with a child of three, the son of one of Barras' friends, they made a group which no classic sculpture could surpass."

Barras tells us with great naïveté, in his memoirs, that the "Little Corsican" only turned his attention to Josephine Beauharnais after a fruitless attempt to obtain favor with Mme. Tallien, and that this lady had treated him with great disdain, telling him "she could do better for herself from any other quarter than to be more credible."

A considerable event was now to take place at the Luxembourg—namely, the reception given to General Bonaparte after the campaign of Italy. For this ceremony (Dec. 10, 1797) the courtyard of the palace was transformed into a sort of temple, and an altar to la Patrie erected in the grand entrance hall. The five directors, with Barras at their head, attended themselves the mistress of foreign intrigue, was prepared with an elaborate banquet.

The scene was made additionally brilliant by the presence of many ladies, whose splendid jewels and rich dresses did honor to the occasion, while their eager faces and murmured admiration betrayed their interest in the young hero. Among these groups not the least noticeable were Mme. de Stael and Mme. Recamier—"Wit and Beauty," as Napoleon himself named them.

Alone of all the assembly the future emperor had assumed no imposing costume. His uniform, that of a general of the Revolution, suggested a character of republican simplicity, while his pale, his gravity and quiet demeanor seemed to depreciate the ceremony of which he was the object. The tone of his speech was equally modest, his theme the pride he felt in his country's scientific conquests and her progress in the paths of peace.

Surely no government could suspect a rival in so well disposed a young man. Two years later the coup d'état of Brumaire drove Barras from the Luxembourg, and the first assembly, which in France has borne the title of senate, began its sittings in the palace.

—Hon. Mrs. E. Stuart Wortley in National Review.

Each in His Trade.
The violinist had been invited to a "family reunion," but it proved that several relatives of his host were present and their demands for music were most persistent.

The violinist played three times, and then, when the applause after his third solo had died away, he turned to his host.

"And now, monsieur," he said eagerly, "now it is that you will show us how you sell ze flour in ze wheat pit. Can I help roll ze barrel in, monsieur?"

Food Laws in France.
Parisians who suspect adulteration in the food or drink they buy take it to the municipal laboratory and have it analyzed free of cost. The city undertakes the prosecution, if need be, of the offender, who, if the case is proved, is liable not only to fine and imprisonment, but to the exposure in his shop window of a notice of "conviction of adulteration."

Her Soft Side.

Child (pausing in front of grandmother, who is on a visit, to consider her carefully)—Granny, which side of you is the soft side? Granny—Why, darling? Child—Because mother says if I keep on the soft side of granny, perhaps she'll give me a bicycle.—Punch.

To pity distress is but human; to relieve it is godlike.

Sex in Battle.

A woman enjoys well cooked, well served food, but her happiness does not depend upon it so completely as does a man's. Without regular, abundant meals a man is disturbed in spirit and considers himself abused. When a man loses his appetite it is because of some physical ailment, never a mental one. A great blow may make the touching of food an actual impossibility for his sister for hours, or even days; but, no matter if the foundations of the earth were shaken, the ordinary man can eat. He can eat at any time or all the time. I know a man who is "living on the street" during his wife's absence, and he confesses to averaging five meals a day.

Food so often is not more than a relief to a girl. Investigate the light housekeeping arrangements of sky parlors, or even first class rooms, and consider the well-groomed girl therein and see if it is. I know a girl, and a college girl, who existed on 87 cents for one week in order to buy an expensive trifle her mother's good sense had denied her. Shoppers, they say, sacrifice their lunches to buy a Laura Jean Libbey novel, but where is the man that ever goes without a reasonable amount of good food for any need he may have?

Powerful Odor of Ambergris.
The druggist held in his hand a lump of gray substance like putty. It was smaller than a baseball and as light as cork. Through it, here and there, ran streaks of yellow and black.

"This is a lump of ambergris," the druggist said. "It is worth about $500, I judge. Smell it."

The patron put his nose to the ambergris. Then he said, surprised:

"Why, it has no smell!"

The druggist, smiling, rubbed it with his sleeve, and immediately a powerful, musklike odor filled the air.

"Crude ambergris," he said, "never smells until you warm it or rub it."

"This chunk of ambergris here smells like musk. That is because it is crude. The odor of prepared ambergris has not the least resemblance to musk."

He rubbed his hand over his sleeve. "From handling this," he said, "my coat will smell for months. My hands, no matter how I wash them, will smell for several days."

Crystallizing Flowers.

The process of crystallizing flowers is simple and can be satisfactorily accomplished by any one who has artistic skill. Arrange some basket forms of any desired pattern with pliable copper wire and wrap them with gauze. Into these tie to the bottom violets, ferns, geranium leaves—in fact, any flowers except full blown roses—and sink them in a solution of alum of one pound to a gallon of water. Wait until the solution has cooled, as the colors will then be preserved in their original beauty, and the crystallized alum will hold them faster than when formed in a hot solution. When you have a light covering of crystals that completely envelops the articles, remove cheerfully and allow it to drip twelve hours. These baskets make a unique ornament and long preserve their freshness.

Rameau and the Dog.

Many eccentricities are pardoned in musical geniuses, especially by those who do not suffer from them. Unfortunately the object of a musician's wrath is quite apt to be unable to appreciate why he has offended.

One can fancy the possessor of the untrained voice who figures in the following story thinking hard things of the celebrated composer Rameau.

One day Rameau while sitting on a lady fixed a stern glance on a little dog who sat in her lap and was barking good naturedly. Suddenly Rameau seized the poor little fellow and threw him out of the window.

"What is the matter?" asked his hostess, much alarmed.

"He barked false!" said Rameau indignantly.

A Puzzler.

At an examination in an English school the teacher was so pleased with his class that he said they could ask him any question they liked.

Some were asked and replied to. Seeing one little fellow in deep thought, the teacher asked him for a question.

The boy answered, with a grave face: "P—please, sir, if you was in a soft mud heap up to your neck and I was to throw a brick at your head, would you duck?"

The answer is not recorded.

Quite Different.

Mother—You've been sitting in the conservatory all this time, and with young Charlie Brown! Am I never to hear a sense of decency in you?

Daughter—'Twas Lord Copperbidge I was with, mamma, dear. Mother—Oh, that's a different matter. Girls will be girls!

For a Rainy Day.
Smith (newly married)—Don't you think we had better lay aside something for a rainy day? Young Wife—Charley, dear, I am so glad you said that. While I was out shopping this morning I bought two lovely silk umbrellas, one for you and one for me.

His Public Speech.
Mrs. Littlewit (proudly)—Only just think! Charles has gone to address a public gathering. Friend—I didn't know he was a speechmaker. Mrs. Littlewit—Nor I, but he's been called upon to make a statement before a meeting of his creditors.

His Recipe.
Long Haired Poet (singing)—There is no breeze that can cool the heat of love. Disappointed—Benedict—Ever tried the marriage refrigerator, son?

"Sightseer's Headache."

"Academy" or "sightseer's" headache is one of the numerous ills of modern civilization. According to observations of Mr. Simeon Snell, described in the London Hospital, there is reason to attribute it in part at least to strain on the muscles that turn the eyeballs upward. A lady who found no inconvenience in visiting the theater when she sat in the dress circle always suffered from severe headache when she sat in the orchestra, where she had to look up. The same effect is produced in picture galleries, especially in looking at pictures hung above the line. Cyclists who lean over to look ahead have the same trouble, and so do compositors and people in many other occupations requiring continued use of the elevator muscles. The eyeballs move from side to side with less strain and discomfort than up and down.

BE QUICK!

Not a minute should be lost after a child shows symptoms of cholera infantum. The first unusual looseness of the bowels should be sufficient warning. If immediate and proper treatment is given, serious consequences will be averted. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is the sure reliance of thousands of mothers and by its aid they have often saved their children's lives. Every household should have a bottle at hand. Get it to-day. It may save a life. For sale by all druggists.

French Red Tape.

Recently the time arrived for G. Stern, the leading jockey of France, to take his term of service in the French army. He made application to enter a cavalry regiment. The authorities at the War Office have refused his request. The reason given is that Stern has only one year to serve and that it is impossible to form an efficient cavalryman in less than three years! This incident is believed to establish a new record in the working of red tapeism.

Dysentery causes the death of more people than small-pox and yellow fever combined. In an army it is dreaded more than a battle. It requires prompt and effective treatment. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been used in nine epidemics of dysentery in the United States with perfect success, and has cured the most malignant cases, both of children and adults, and under the most trying conditions. Every household should have a bottle at hand. Get it to-day. It may save a life. Sold by all druggists.

Mr. Morley's Arithmetic.

Mr. Algernon Ashton draws attention to the following curious passage in Mr. John Morley's biography of Gladstone: "He (Disraeli) was five years older (perhaps more) than Mr. Gladstone." What did Mr. Morley mean by that phrase, "perhaps more"? Gladstone was born on Dec. 29, 1809, Disraeli on Dec. 21, 1804. The difference between the two men's ages was, therefore, just five years. The only explanation seems to be that Oxford scholars, however distinguished, are not very strong on arithmetic!

RAISING TURKEYS.

How to Care For and Feed Poultry to Get Good Results.

About the twenty-fifth day dust the hen thoroughly with a good insect powder, and after eggs begin to chip close the nest up tight, for as soon as the first poult is out a few hours they will get out of the nest and stroll off, sometimes causing the hen to follow with perhaps a few poults, says H. Simmons in Western Poultry Journal. I take them from the nest about two hours after all are hatched. After taking the poults from the nest I put them in a dry, warm coop with a small pen in front of the coop, about 10 by 10 feet, for if the pen or yard is too large when the hen is confined in a coop poults may hobble too far to the corner of the yard and not find their way back to the hen, and if left so for a few hours, even on a fine day, will be chilled almost to death.

I think it best not to feed the first day. For the first few days thereafter good, sweet bread crumbs, slightly moistened with sweet skimmed milk, now, remember I say "sweet," not milk that has stood around for a half day or more on a hot day. Feed very lightly three or four times a day for the first few days. In the morning I give a little clean dish to drink in a shallow clean dish, being careful to remove before souring. After they are three or four days old I put the hen with the poults in a lot or pen of about 32 by 16 feet, using 16 foot boards and having the pen about 2½ feet high, making the pen tight, so as to hold the poults in, leaving the hen free to fly in or out at her will. In this way I have had my success. The hen will be happy and contented if they have grass in the pen and proper attention is given.

It is best to give the hen, before feeding poults, a feed of corn or other coarse grain to satisfy most of her hunger, so she will not eat the more costly feed of her young. After the poults are four or five days old I commence feeding with milk curds or cottage cheese mixed with bread crumbs and steel cut oatmeal. A little coarse shorts may be added; also commence once a day to feed a little cracked wheat, and after two weeks old wheat may be fed whole. On very fine days I leave them out of the pen a part of the day, but get them up in the pen by at least 4 o'clock. After I get the hen in the pen I leave her to herself until after dark. I then take a fair sized A shaped coop and put it over her gently and close up well for the night. As soon as warm days come be sure to provide some sort of shade for them in their pen. Old boards fastened to south side of pen and sloping to north is fine and also makes a fine protection from sudden showers. After the poults begin to fly over this pen they must be given the run of the fields.

Fowl House For a Back Yard.

The plan herewith shown, reproduced from the Feather, is an excellent one for the fancier who has a back yard and desires a special house for his birds. The dimensions of houses may be varied to suit the size of yard, running from fence to fence. The framework should be substantially built and boarded on the outside with tongued and grooved siding. The inner side should be boarded also with the same kind of material, and if possible the space between the walls should be filled with sawdust.

The floor should be made of tongued and grooved material securely nailed to the timbers below. The underneath part of the roof should be lined with the same material as the sides, and the outside of the roof should be shingled or covered with tin. Where the house joins the fence the cracks should be well covered to prevent rain from leaking through, and every precaution should be taken to keep the interior of the house free from dampness.

Remedy For Sour Crop in Chickens.

Use half a teaspoonful of tincture of nuxvomica in each quart of drinking water, allowing the birds no other drink. See that they have a plentiful supply of green food daily; also keep grit and granulated charcoal always before them.—Reliable Poultry Journal.

Poultry Notes.

The demand for turkeys always exceeds the supply. Incubators should be watched if best results are expected.

Let geese go to grass and they will be practically self sustaining. Fertile eggs do not keep as well as those produced by an unmated hen.

Old hens and tough roosters make good chicken salad during the picnic season.
