SARNIA AFTER INDUSTRIES.

The Town Council of Sarnia has taken hold of the question of induc ing new industries to locate there. Councillor Cook has given notice that he will introduce a by-law to have the town raise $50,000 to assist new industries, on condition that the same amount is subscribed by business men. The proposal is to have one hundred business men subscribe $50) apiece, payable in instalments running over a period of five years, the Council to stand in the same terms, and the total sam of $100,-690 to be held available when an industry required assistance. Mr. Cook pointed out that at present if any money had to be raised for industrial Oh, the toll we lost and the spoil we purposes, there would be difficulty in securing it, whereas with a large fund in the hands of a committee composed of solid business men and (And now we know that he knew too possible to take business to any But we didn't understand. manufacturers proposing to locate in the town. A Woman of the Day.

Lady Edgar, President of the National Council of Women of Canada, is the widow of the Hon. Sir James. David Edgar, K.C.M.G., P.C., late Speaker of the House of Commons of Canada. She has held the offices of President and Vice-President of the Women's Canadian Historical Society, has been Vice-President of the United Empire Loyi. ist Society, and was for ten years Secretary of the Infants' Home and Infirmary of Toronto. Lady Edgar has contributed from time to time articles on historical subjects to magazines and journals. Her first book, "Ten Years of Upper Canada in Peace and War," won the praise of the late Wr. Gladstone as the best book he had ever read on Canada. Her next production, "The Life of General Brock," appeared in the "Makers of Canada Series," in 1905, and has been favorably reviewed in the English and Canadian press. Lady Edgar is now engaged in writing the life of James Edgar, Secretary to the Chevalier de St. George, which is being compiled by permission of King Edward from letters and manuscripts in the Royal libraries.

Quaint Verses On Tomb of Mariner. Quaint Verses On Tomb of Mariner.
The destruction by fire of the historic and beautiful Abbey of Selby not only deprives Yorkshire of its most perfect monastic church, but robs the country of a national relic of surpassing interest. Few churches possess the architectural interest of Selby Abbey. It owes its foundation in 1068 to William the Conqueror, whose son Henry. liam the Conqueror, whose son Henry, afterwards Henry I., is traditionally supposed to have been born in Selby. One of the most curious epitaphs in the Abbey of Selby was in the reredos on the east side. It read:

I'm here enclosed below. And in this Silent Bay I lie

"You shall hear from me in an hour." said the doctor on leaving, "and I shall send you some pills which I am sure will do you good." Before the time was up Godsmith's servant brought the poor woman a small box, which on being opened was found to contain 10 guineas, with the following directions:

"To be used as necessities require. Be patient and of good heart."

How Servia Dines.

Table manners amount to very little among the Servians. There is a perfect babel of conversation, the band shrieks and groans and wails, and amid the din the waiters hurry hither and thither Some aggressive looking amid the din the waiters hurry hither and thither. Some aggressive looking Servian, with a waist belt full of pistols and knives, will swagger erromoniously up and down the room. Officers of the local garrison form a group at another table, their smart uniforms a strange contrast to the medley of the others. Anon they become uproariously intoxicated and sing national songs to the music of the orchestra, while mine host, seated on a raised ohair at the end of the room, beams affably upon his guests.—R. L. Jefferson in Wide World Magazine.

Good From An Evil.

In Australia, where the rabbit is a pest, there is an annual "roundup," at which millions of the animals are slaughtered. The rabbits are utilized for their fur and meat, much of which is exported. During the year over 20,000,000 rabbits were sent to other countries frozen in the fur or in the form of canned means.

On the day for the execution there appeared in the streets a band of sweepers argued with leafy twigs, followed by a squad of the city Arab pclice with fixed bayonets. Then came the criminal, dressed in new white garments, with a new halter around his neck and new ropes attached to his arms. The ends of these ropes were held by policemen. The ordinary thing is for the condemned man to walk, but in this case he was so overcome that he had to be conveyed in a jutka.

On arriving at the fatal spot the murderer was made to alight and kneel down, while the policemen handed over charge of the cords to the executioner's attendants, one of whom, seizing the end of the halter, stood in front of the felon, while others held the cords pinioning the arms behind. The executioner's held the cords pinioning the arms behind. The executioner's held the city police on duty thrice replied: "The Amin."

Then an attendant armed with a long needle pricked the condemned man in the back, causing him to start forward. At the same instant those holding the cords laid themselves back in opposite directions as in a tug-of-war contest, with the result that the wretch's neck was stretched; and, following the reply of the chief of police, the executioner's blade descended fair and true on the neck, severing the head completely.

The other immigrants who stood around looked on Leslie with rather envious eyes because he carried what to them seemed so large a sum of money in his pockets and was going back home to have a merry Christ-

Boys On the Farm.

Boys On the Farm.

At last it seems to have dawned upon people that the holding up of successful lawyers and doctors and preachers to country boys as the only models worthy of adoption has been one of the main causes of the exodus from the farms to the city. It was all nonsense. expect that the boys would stay on the farm when every teacher was holding up for their emulation. Horace Greeley, Abraham Lincoln, Edward Blake, Rev. Dr. Cavcn. Dr. Osler and many others that might be mentioned. These are great men, but they all possess one characteristic that they all left the farm to achiev success, or at all events achiev success, or at all events achieved. Austrália's Caves.

The Narracoote caves, in south Australia, are situated in the southeastern portion of the state, the principal chamber, known as the "big cave," with its magnificent profusion of beautiful stalnetites and stalagmites, forming a dazzling spectacle when illuminated by the magnesium light. In a second chamber, or cave, nature has been prodigal of the mystical ornament with which the whole place abounds. There are pillars so finely formed and covered with such dainty trellis work, curious drippings of lime creating such wonderful masses of lovely sorol work, that the eye is bewildered with the extent and rarity of the adornment. It is like a palace of ice, with a rich profusion of frozen silvery cascades and fountains all around. Western Australia possesses also a couple of extensive cave systems which fairly rival those of New South Wales, Queensland and South Australia.

Lefty Scientific Station. Lefty Scientific Station.

The highest scientific station in the world stands on the summit of Mount Misti, an extinct volcano in Southern Peru. The altitude of this station is 19,300 feet above sea level. No one lives at the station. No one could exist there, as the air is too rare and cold. The thermometer on the top of Misti often falls to 25 degrees below zero. Once a month an observer climbs up to the station to take the records of the instruments. It occupies two days to climb up and two days to return.

People are more interested in science than they used to be, remarks a high authority. But it is quite possible to be too scientific. A friend of mine got into serious trouble by expressing a fondness for ethyl hydroxide in the hearing of his wife, whose name happened to be Dera.

High Priced Bumblebees.

Many years ago the farmers of Australia, imported bumblebees from England and set them free in their clover fields. Before the arrival of the bees clover did not flourish in Australia, but after their coming the farmers had no more difficulty on that score. Mr. Darwin had shown that bumblebees were the only insects fond of clover nectar which possessed a proboscis sufficiently long to reach the bottom of the long, tube-like flowers and at the same time a body heavy enough to bend down the clover head so that the pollen would fall on the insect's back and thus be carried off to fertilize other flowers of the same species. The other day, while Mrs. Louis Allard, of Madoc, was attending to her duties in trapping along the lake, she noticed a ripple on the surface of the water, and upon further investigation saw that it was a large maskinonge. As she drew near with her boat the monster disappeared, but presently appeared on the surface again in a sort of torpid state. She quickly despatched it with her batchet, and after a severe struggle in which her hands were more or less cut, succeeded in landing her prize. The fish in endeavoring to swallow a ling got choked, and would no doubt have died in a short time. Mrs. A landed her game, and on weighing it found it tipped the beam at 32 lbs.
