Greer's Mud Muddle Mumbles

By ERWIN GREER

(President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago)

The automobile manufacturer, as well as the dealer and salesman, positively deny that the dictionary contains such terms as "accident," "mishap" or "tough luck." "Don't ever," they say, "mention an accident it worries folks and we want to keep them full of faith and happiness." Doubtless it is mostly due to this attitude that the motorist travels from ocean to ocean without worrying in the least that his tool kit is minus such incidentals as chains, ropes, etc. Gosh it's no wonder that old Demon Mud and his wife Sandy Soli chuckle so when they gather some unfortunate motor car in their clinging embrace. And the chuckle, interpreted means: "Now what are you going to do about it?"

Sometimes, though not very often thank heaven, mud holes happen on purpose. Last summer I ran across a rural god mine on a muddy piece of road in Kentucky. During the day these native Ponzi's coined money by pulling motor cars out of the bog with mules. At night they worked faithfully carrying water to that bog in preparation for the next day's harvest of coin. Yep, they hooked me for five bucks, but in coming back over the same road, I negotiated the bog with the assistance of a long rope hitched to a tree, the other end being wound around my rear wheel hub. My pop-eyed audience of water carriers were thoroughly disgusted. A little later the American Automobile Association busted that gold mine by putting Mr. Detour on the job.

In using the jack, where the axle is only a few inches above the ground dig a hole and set a stone or a block of wood at the bottom. Then set the jack on it. With planks under the wheels, one or more men should shove the car while a third man does the driving. The clutch should be engaged slowly and traction picked up with a slow and steady headway. Some motorists resort to deflating their tires while others carry strips of canvas to slip under their wheels. Whatever situation arises should be met with the utmost diplomacy and head-work. Otherwise Demon Mud will take his toll in stripped gears or burned clutches.
