LIGHTS ON IN HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, Oct. 26. The military authorities announced regulations prohibiting lights in the city at night time, a precaution at the time of enemy submarine activity in the North Atlantic waters, no longer necessary, these regulations are in operative.

HOLD THEM FAST.

LONDON, Oct. 26. German ships should not be set after the war to extend their share of the world's carrying trade and to profit by the losses which the government by means mainly naval have inflicted upon the ships of the Allies. This plan is urged upon the British government in a resolution adopted by the Council of the number of Shipping of the United Kingdom. The Council points out that any losses have been suffered by shipping companies at the hands of the Germans. Half of Germany's shipping is declared to be in neutral waters.

PARIS, Oct. 27. A marked advance by the French in the sector between the Oise and Serre Rivers is recorded in the official communication issued by the War Office to-night. Numerous villages have been captured and at certain points the advance amounts to about five miles. Since Oct. 24 the number of prisoners taken by the first army has reached 3,700. In the booty taken by the army in the same period were twenty cannon and several hundred machine guns.

ROME, Oct. 27.

The official statement issued by the War Office to-night says the advance of our tenth army across the Piave in the area of the island of Grave di Pandopoli commenced at 6.45 o'clock this morning. The Italian troops on the right met with strong resistance. According to the latest reports after heavy fighting this resistance was overcome and the advance successfully commenced. On our left the British troops are advancing satisfactorily and have reached their first objective according to the programme, overcoming strong resistance.

LONDON, Oct. 27. The Germans launched heavy counter attacks against the British south of Valenciennes to-day, but were repulsed with losses, Field Marshal Haig reports from headquarters to-night.

LONDON, Oct. 27.

It is understood in authoritative quarters that the Allied governments will not reveal their armistice terms until Germany has replied to President Wilson's last note. Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour, accompanied by naval and military officers have gone to France.

BASEL, Oct. 27.

Austria's rejoinder to President Wilson's note is ready, according to Vienna papers. It was submitted to authorized parties to-day. It will be sent this evening or to-morrow to Washington. It is couched in the most conciliatory terms.

LONDON, Oct. 26.

The German Government is not contemplating at the present time any further note to President Wilson, says an Exchange despatch from Copenhagen. It is probable that the Government will make a declaration in the Reichstag to the effect that Germany is awaiting the peace conditions of the Allies.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 27. (By the A.P.)—Germany's answer to President Wilson's latest communication says the German government has taken cognizance of the answer by the president of the United States. The President is aware of the far-reaching things which have been carried out and are being carried out in the German constitutional structure.

and the peace negotiations are being conducted by a people's government in whose hands rests both actually and constitutionally the power to make the deciding conclusions. The military powers are subject to it. The German Government now awaits proposals for an armistice which will be the first step towards a just peace as the President has described it in his proclamation. Signed SOLF.

TALK ON PRIVATION.

Are claims of sacrifice all fibs? I see around me men and dames who have much fat upon their ribs, and costly rags upon their frames. Their silks and feathers still they flaunt, and wear fine linc upon their domes, and talk of how the wolf of want is howling by their humble homes. We eat as much as in the times when peace was here, with all its charms, before the Prussians beastly crimos led Uncle Same to take up arms. And when we've stowed away a steak, and packed some pie and pudding down, we think we've made some tyrant quake because the bread we ate was brown. The clothes we wear, it seems to me, are just as gaudy as they were before our boys went o'er the sea to fill the air with German fur. We're just as keen to blow the moon as though we hadn't any foes; we take in every brand of fun from prize fights down to movie shows. We talk as though our souls were set on putting Wilhelm on a crutch, but have you seen a fellow yet who looks as though he'd suffered much? We'll talk of sacrifice, no doubt, until the morn of peace has dawned; and meanwhile every loyal scout should miss no chance to buy a bond.

General Haig A Great Leader.

A rumor, probably baseless, has been circulated to the effect that Sir Douglas Haig is to be retired at his own request, and this gives the New York Times an opportunity to pay tribute to the British Field Marshal. "Modest and indifferent to fame," it says, "he will be reckoned among the great commanders of the greatest war in history." This is no more than the truth. Sir Douglas Haig has had a task that is one of the greatest ever laid on the shoulders of one man. Yet he has not weakened under it. So far as we may judge from the frequent photographs we have seen of him, his face shows little sign of the terrific strain he has been under since Lord French retired and left him in charge of the British armies. Often he is seen smiling, and 57 he is in the very prime of life, and looks younger. He has been described as a "consummate horseman," and his daily rides, which have been but rarely interrupted for many years, may probably explain the slight slope of his shoulders. Correspondents say that he is as fit physically as any man in his army.

As the Times remarks the wonder is that he has gone through this ordeal with a sound brain and a strength apparently unimpaired, for since 1915 there have been three commanders of the French army. Rarely indeed does he permit any sign of emotion to escape him, and this made all the more memorable his message to the British army on Sept. 10, when he thanked it for its valor and devotion in these words: "The capture of 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns in the course of four weeks' fighting speaks for the magnitude of your efforts and the magnificence of your achievements." He said that the army had passed through many dark days, but, "Praise God, these never will return." It is not of ten that this great soldier speaks the name of God, except when he attends the little Presbyterian Church near his headquarters every Sunday morning. Anything more different than his orders to his army and those issued by the German Kaiser it would be hard to imagine. Haig never promises much, never indulges in threats. He performs and then tersely reports.

The Times says that with his fellow corps commander, Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, Haig more than once saved the British army in the retreat from Mons. It was on that occasion, according to the historian, Major Ernest W. Hamilton, that 100 Victoria Crosses were earned for every one that was given. Haig and Smith-

Donrien vied with each other in fighting rear-guard actions, each one as desperate as any forlorn hope, and the final escape of the army was hardly short of a miracle. On one occasion Haig said: "We shall have to hold on here for a while if we all die for it," and hold on they did, those Glorious Contemptibles. On another occasion Haig and his little escort of the 17th Lancers rode back along a road where shells were falling thick and fast for no other reason than to encourage his men, the place of a general being behind the line. He stood with Sir John French near Gheluvelt, after the order to retire had been given, and to him came the messenger that it was the Germans who were in retreat. This was the time when Sir Charles Fitzclarence with the Worcester Regiment stemmed the enemy advance and turned the tide of battle.

"Lucky" Haig the Marshal used to be called in the army, because of his rapid promotions, partly, and because he was a favorite at Court and in Mayfair. It was through the influence of the general Duke of Cambridge that he secured his commission after he had been rejected through defective eyesight. Lord Roberts saved him from drowning in the Modder River. But Luck does not explain his career. He is a great soldier, and more than that, a soldier's soldier. It is said that when it became generally known in the army that Lord French, then Sir John French, was to retire, there was but one man on the soldiers' lips when the question of his successor was discussed, and the name was Haig. He is loved by the men because he knows the men. Only such a commander would have dared to issue that famous "back to back" order. Only a British army could be trusted with the admission that the case was so desperate. What followed proved what British valor could do when called on for the supreme effort by a trusted leader.

Didn't Know he was Running.

(From the Louisville Courier-Journal.)
"I was talking to my colored man of all work the other day," said James Yates Mellen of Cleveland, "and I asked him if he went to church every Sunday," he said, "Are you a member?" "Yesuh," what church?" "Presbyterian," "Do you believe in the doctrine of election?" "Yessuh." "Do you think I am elected to be saved?" "Law, Mr. Mellen, I didn't wot' know you all was a candidate."
