A Lover's Triumph.

"My brother!" retorted Everett, aroused afresh at the word; "he has been nothing but a stumbling-block in my path ever since I saw him; he humiliated me before friends in a way that I have never forgiven; he thwarted me in my hopes at college, and in many plans—all but the last one," he concluded, with a taunting laugh, turning defiantly toward Geoffrey, who was regarding him with more of sorrow than of anger.

"What do you mean, my son?" demanded his father, who saw that something was very wrong between them, and was almost in despair over his inexplicable conduct.

"Has he not told you how I cheated him out of his wife?" Everett asked, supposing, of course, that that wretched story had been rehearsed.

"Cheated him out of his wife?" repeated Colonel Mapleson, growing pale, and glancing apprehensively from one to the other.

His son gave vent to a short, nervous laugh, but feeling considerably crestfallen at having so recklessly betrayed himself, since he saw nothing had been said about his miserable plot.

Mr. Huntress here interposed, seeing that the truth must come out, and explained in a few brief sentences what had happened.

Colonel Mapleson sank back white and nervous as he listened, realizing, almost at the outset, the terrible thing which his son had so nearly accomplished.

"Do you know what you have done, Everett Mapleson?" he said, in a solemn, impressive tone, when his visitor concluded, and the young man was startled and averted in spite of his bravado. "You have been upon the brink of a fearful precipice; you have very nearly committed a dreadful crime, for which I could not have forgiven you, for which you would never have forgiven yourself; the girl whom you have sought to make your wife is your sister."

The young man grew pale, but more at his father's tone than from any conviction of the truth of his statement. But he rallied after a moment. "What stuff are you telling me?" he retorted, contemptuously.

"It is no stuff," it is the sternest truth; Gladys Huntress is an adopted daughter."

"Hah!" and now Everett Mapleson seemed suddenly galvanized. "Did Annie Dale have another child?" he demanded, with useless lips.

"No; but she is your mother's child by a former marriage."

"Great heaven!"

There was no defiance or recklessness in his manner now. He sank breathless upon a chair, a horrified look upon his face, a shiver shaking him from head to foot, perspiration starting from every pore.

"My mother's child! Impossible! Who told you?" he questioned hoarsely.

"Your mother herself. She was unexpectedly brought face to face with Mr. Huntress tonight; she recognized him, and fainted. Upon recovering she confessed to a former marriage, and said, in order to conceal the fact, she had been obliged to give away her child—that Mr. Huntress was the man who adopted her."

Colonel Mapleson then went on to explain more at length something of the occurrences of the evening, but he was interrupted in the midst of his recital by Everett throwing himself prostrate upon the floor, while a heart-rending groan burst from him as he fell.

When they raised him he was unconscious, and a small stream of blood was trickling down his mouth.

He was carried at once to his room, a servant was immediately dispatched for a doctor, while his anxious friends used what remedies there were at hand for his relief.

When the physician arrived he said his patient had evidently been suffering from a severe cold for several days, and that this, with weariness of body and a sudden shock of some kind, had brought on the hemorrhage, while there were also some indications of a brain trouble, and a severe illness would doubtless result.

Mr. Huntress and Geoffrey proposed going away early the next morning, but Colonel Mapleson, who seemed greatly unmoved by the excitement of the previous evening, begged them to remain for a few days at least, as he could not bear to give up Geoffrey so soon after being reunited to him.

They had not the heart to leave him in his trouble after that, and consented to remain long enough to learn what the prospects of Everett's recovery would be.

But he grew steadily worse, and raved in the wildest delirium, recognizing no one, although there was no return of the hemorrhage. At the end of four days Mr. Huntress decided that he must go home, but Geoffrey concluded that it was his duty to remain with his father until the crisis in Everett's illness should be passed, for Col. Mapleson seemed so lean upon and to experience much comfort from his presence.

He proved the greatest assistance in the sick-room, where he attended Everett most faithfully, and endeavored himself to the whole household by his gentlemanly and courteous bearing.

At the end of three weeks the fever turned, and Everett was pronounced out of danger of any further brain trouble, although it would be a long time before he would fully recover from the weakness of his lungs.

Geoffrey withdrew himself immediately from the sick-room as soon as the patient recovered consciousness, realizing that his presence might be annoying to Everett, and regard his convalescence; although he remained at Vue de l'Eau for another week, at the earnest request of both Colonel and Mrs. Mapleson.

Then he felt that he could not stay longer from Gladys, and he returned to Brooklyn, taking with him the knowledge of his father's firm and lasting affection, and Mrs. Mapleson's respect and friendship, together with the handsome fortune which he had inherited from Robert Dale, and which Colonel Mapleson had transferred to him.

To the Shareholders of the Colorado Gold Mining & Development Co.

The foregoing advertisement is self-explanatory and shows the faith the managing director has in the future of this Company.

The present dividend of 1 per cent. a month on the shares of this Company is guaranteed for a period of five years by Messrs. Lownsbrough & Co., Bankers, and the Managing Director, J. Grant Lyman. The same shares offered by the Company, carrying the same dividend, but not guaranteed by Messrs. Lownsbrough & Co., or J. Grant Lyman, we are offering for 75c.

It goes without saying that the Company, in order to pay dividends on part of its stock, must pay dividends on all, as there is no such thing as "preferred stock," but in personally and jointly guaranteeing these dividends we make assurance a positive fact, and, of course, such stock is worth more money.

The writer of this letter now holds over 250,000 shares of this stock, and the proposed improvements should result in a material increase in my dividends as well as enhance the value of my stock, consequently I feel that I can well afford to guarantee dividends on such an amount of stock as it will be necessary for the Company to sell in order that they may make the improvements outlined.

The benefits that will accrue to the Managing Director every shareholder will participate in in direct proportion to his interest in the Company without incurring the liability that the Managing Director assumes.

In order that there can be no question as to whether my guarantee is good or not, I have arranged for a further guarantee by Messrs. Lownsbrough & Co., Bankers, thus insuring the payment of the dividends without the shadow of a doubt.

Trusting you will appreciate the efforts we are putting forth for the benefit of this Company,

I remain, dear sirs,

Very truly yours,

J. GRANT LYMAN,

Managing Director.
