Be Largest in Great Britain.

London, Feb. 24.—On the site where Hengler's circus used to stand in Argyll street, Oxford street, a variety theatre is now in the course of erection, which, when ready for opening in September next, will be the largest music hall in Great Britain. It is being bullt to seat about 5,000 people, and when finished will, including the price paid for the site, have cost $1,000,000.

The auditorium will consist of stalls, boxes and two vast tiers, the width of the floor space being no less than one hundred feet. Every portion of the interior floors will be carpeted, and even in the circle, as the upper tier is to be called, where sixpence is to be the price of admission, velvet tip-up chairs will be provided. Luxury and comfort are to be the objects aimed at in the fitting of the interior, and the keynote of the color scheme, which will necessitate the employment of quantities of carved white marble, will be white.
