HEART WAS SO

Mrs. O. E. Fitzgerald, 106 Ross street, St. Thomas, Ont., writes: "In the fall of 1921 I was taken ill with my heart, but I did not pay much attention to it. I kept on with my household duties, but seemed to become worse and worse, and finally had to call in a doctor. He said I was all run down, and was a nervous wreck. I had a severe pain in my chest which would move over to my heart, and it became so bad I could not lie down, as when I did I had such a smothering feeling I would have to sit up in bed till it passed away.

"I tried several remedies, but with respect to the passion of the passion of

"The man my uncle says I must marry; I can't bear him near me. But my uncle says I must marry him because he's a millionaire."

"You're never going to be made to do anything now, Desiree," he answered. "I'll see nobody makes you."

They drove back and after lunch, when she was out shopping with Mrs Green, he went to the manager and inquired the name of the best eye specialist in the place. Then he telephoned and made an appointment for 5 o'clock. At 4 he had arranged to meet Desiree's lips, and the thought of the sight that was so soon to be hers. He intended to have what he wanted, no matter what it cost.

Before long the coveted garment was spread before him—a cloak of white fur, glossy as silk, soft as velvet, with a fringe of black-tipped tails, and a hood that would drop it a most fascinating manner about a small face.

When the cloak was packed up and put into his motor, he went to a

WHENFEET HURT

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" both. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take snother dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of Desiree, is holding the "Necklace of Tears," Desiree's valuable heirloom, in Safe-keeping from the clutches of her conspiring relatives. After observoing a ballroom theft in which Desiree, the count and Eugene take part, he accuses her of being a crook, but discovers afterward that she is blind. Mortified, Desiree flees to her servant's daughter's home nearby, while Wilson searches for Desiree and finally discovers her at Eze. They are reconciled and Wilson apologizes for his statements He brings her back to the hotel where she is cared for by Mrs. Green while Wilson tells the Gilberts point blank where Desiree is and that he intends to keep the jewels. Wilson learns from Desiree that her guardian has never tried to correct her blindness.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only reinedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

CHAPTER XV

A Consultation

That morning Wilson took his charge for a drive to a favorite spot of his—a jutting tongue of land where pink and white and yellow villas nestled among orange, lemon and loquat trees. Because she could not see, he took her to the sweetest spot he could find, where wild thyme and lavender grew, where the sun drew out the incense of the pines, and the sea crooned on the rocks and the sea crooned on the rocks and the sea crooned on the rocks.
