because to sell the present time of depression would be suicidal.

Mr. Vortook on combing forward to read statement was quite warmly applanded. The statement was as follows:

"You will need no assurance from me of the depth of my regret in appearing before you all in the position which I occupy to day. Believe me when I say that the present unhappy position has been brought about through no want of attention to my duties; neither have I been headless of the funds entrusted to my care. The assignees, who have made the closest examinations into our business, will assure you that I have not speculated in stocks, real estate or commedity of any kind, but that I have endeavored to do a sound and careful business, and to follow as closely as possible in the steps of the late Mr. Green, in lending every assistance in our power to help forward a large number of merchants in this city and Province in their legitimate business, without disregard of the interests of our depositors.
