STILL WE TRUST.

Still we trust, though earth seem dark and dreary, And the heart faint beneath His chastening rod; Though rough and steep our pathway, worn and weary, Still will we trust in God.

Our eyes see dimly, till by faith anointed, And our blind choosing brings us grief and pain; Through Him alone who hath our way appointed, We find our peace again.

Choose for us, God! Nor let our weak preferring, Cheat our poor souls of good Thou hast designed; Choose for us, God! Thy wisdom is unerring, And we are fools and blind.

So from our sky the night shall furl her shadows, And day pour gladness through his golden gates; Our rough path leads to flower-enamelled meadows, Where joy our coming waits.

Let us press on in patient self-denial,
Accept the hardship, shrinking not from loss;
Our guerdon lies beyond the hour of trial,
Our crown beyond the cross.

RELIGIOUS MOVEMENT IN BRITAIN.

The remarkable religious movement to which we have referred in several of our late issues, still continues. We could fill page after page with interesting accounts of the work in various places. Waves of spiritual influence are spreading in different directions, and to the remotest quarters of the country. We give the following from the London Weekly Review:—

From many parts of the country we learn that where the work has been in operation for some time past it is extending and being consolidated, that a spirit of earnest prayer is being manifested in towns and villages most cheering to God's people, and that the hearts of many are moved to desire a share of the blessing that is being poured out. In Glasgow, Messrs. Moody and Sankey are continuing their labours, and the work has been greatly extended since they commenced. Many churches and halls have been filled every day and evening, with large audiences; meetings continue to be field with different sections of the community, and there have been special services for children, Sabbath-school teachers, students, ladies, and also for gentlemen. The Christian young men have been specially interested, and have been led to assist in evangelistic work among other young men, and
