

"Yes go; I am just in the middle of an account."

Father Chauvel used to laugh and call me "Muscadin" when he saw me so well shaved and dressed, and my tail so well plaited; and then I used to blush. He often used to offer me his snuff-box, and cry out—

"Take a pinch, citizen Michel."

But what would Margaret say if I daubed my nose with snuff? I told Chauvel that snuff gave me a headache, and then he would laugh and call me an aristocrat who was afraid to soil his shirt-frill. He used to laugh at me, but at bottom he liked me; and he knew very well that I did not stay there from one till six or seven on Sundays only for the sake of pretending to read, or of talking politics with him. He was too sharp not to see things clearly enough, and if he let me smile at Margaret it was because he thought me a good lad, or he would have turned me out without hesitation. So he used to see me with pleasure, and my ideas corresponded, too, with his, only when he saw me he recommended me to read useful books. He lent me whatever I liked in his library; he had none but serious works in it.
