SELECTING A VICTIM.

A story is going the rounds about Charley —, a well-known produce dealer on State street, that is really too good to keep. Not many weeks ago he had occasion to visit New York, when he had the following unique adventure with a bunco steerer. This is how he tells it himself:

"I was walking up Broadway about three o'clock that afternoon, when I saw a spruce young fellow coming toward me with a joyous smile of recognition on his countenance. Almost involuntarily I took my hand out of my pocket to meet his.

"How do you do, Mr. Blank? How are all the people in Hartford?" he said, shaking me cordially by the hand. "I don't know as you remember me. My name is —."

"Now, hold right on—stop right where you are," said I. "You've gone far enough. I don't know you, and you don't know me.
Hadden't you better go before I call a policeman?"

"The fellow turned and was rapidly getting round the corner, when I called to him.

"Hello there! Come back; I want to talk with you."

"He hesitated.

"That's all right," I said; "come on back."
He walked towards me a few steps.

"Come, let us go in here and have something," He accepted.

"Now," said I, as we put down our empty glasses, "I want to ask you what it was you saw about me that made you think you could work that game?"

"Well, I will tell you," he said, with a deprecating sort of smile, "I noticed that you wore rubbers."—Hartford Times.
