

The objectives of the United States and Canada, the major standards and ideals of the American and Canadian peoples - the great essentials; these by tradition and by choice are the same both sides of the border and, please God, will remain so. Let us then in the multitudinous dealings we have with each other - on this North American Continent and beyond - so conduct ourselves that the next quarter century will add still greater strength, still closer friendship and still more confident mutual understanding and respect to the unique association of our two nations.

---

S/C