with the universities stripped of the best of their talent and with the interest of those who are left centred on something more serious than sport, the indications were very unfavorable that the undergraduates of Toronto would support a team this year, and that their blue and white pennants and champlonship hopes, if they have entertained any for 1916, would fade away and die a natural death.

The gridiron stars have all donned the khaki. There are none left of the "old guard," altho it looks from here as if an excellent feam could be collected "somewhere in France." Nothing but the blue and white uniforms are now left at Varsity to remind the lovers of the great autumn pastime of the glory which the wearers of old Varsity's colors have won for their alma mater. The picture of last year's champlonship team with Charlle Gage in the centre and with the old mainstays gathered around him will not have a picture of a 1916 team placed alongside of it. Most of the few braves who are left will join one of the university units this fall, and will go forth to join the comrades who have gone before them.
