Khaki Band Mark. The Earl of Derby's proposal that munition workers and men physically unfit for military service and recruits on the waiting list shall wear aki armbands, appears to be popu lar, and there is a probability that millions of British men will soon appear thus decorated. The position of able-bodied young men in Great Britain without a uniform is an uncomfortable one these days. Young women offer them white feathers; people in the tramcars make sarcastic remarks, and recruiting bands yell at them in the streets.

The distinguishing mark of the khaki band will show the public that they are doing their duty or are willing to do it, and relieve them of these humiliating attentions. No Politics in Cabinet.

WHOLE COMPANY GOOD

Comedy Mark This Excellent Play.

If there be any other form of art so engrossing, so amusing, so thoroly de-lightful, or more calculated to render one oblivious to everything outside the immediate present than a good play, the public has not yet discovered it. Last night's performance of "The White Feather," at the Royal Alexandra, filled all the requirements and the audience, which completely filled George McManus' popular cartoon the house, were satisfied in every respect. A good company can do nothing with a poor play, and many a good play has been murdered by those responsible for its survival. But both the of camedy satchy murdered for the stage production is a combination sponsible for its survival. But both the play and the company in this case are of the first quality, and the result is the usual overflowing appreciation of a highly appreciative audience. There were half a dozen curtain calls at the close of the second act, and the various of the second act of the of the second act, and the various situations brought forth the warmest of the second act, and the various situations brought forth the warmest applause. The patriotic feeling of the audience must be allowed for to some extent, but the authors do not transgress in this respect, but permit the sentiment to be gathered instead of thrusting it across the footlights. Lechmere Worrall and J. E. Harold Terry have accomplished an excellnt piece of workmanship in "The White Feather." It is nothing like Ibsen or Strindbrg or Brieux or any of the psychological experts and dramatic pieneers who have cultivated the aca-is any better it must be a marvelous performance. There is something of Captain Kettle and Sherlock Holmes perfectly bewizarding. It is truly delightful to hear him deliver such lines as those about "casting nasturtiums on your pater-nity," and "Til pay for the beastly bird, and that's the end of the matter so far as I am concerned." He reveals the whole secret of British herves. the whole secret of British blarney, as distinguished from the Irish variety in these passages, and leaves it inimitable. Arthur Elliott as Preston, the thick-headed British magistrate, who calls a spade a spade, was per-haps slightly on the side of caricature,

SAM HOWE AT GAYETY HAS SOME NEW COMEDY

Sam Howe, the inimitable Hebrew comedian, is paying his annual visit to Toronto at the Gayety Theatre this week. He has a new line of real "Kosher" comedy that kept the audience in a continual uproar of laughter thruout the performance at yesterday's matinee. During the second act Howe sings the "Ragtime Ga.zotosky," a new Jewish parody. Florence Mill, the leading lady, appears in a number of lavish costumes, and her songs take well with the audience.

Tense Situations and Fine Plenty of Laughs in the Adventures of Gearge Mc-Manus' Characters.

As a rule plays written for the purpose of making folks laugh cannot coast of continuity of plot or story, but in "Bringing up Father," the cartoon musical comedy at the Grand George McManus' popular cartoon creation, "Jiggs Mahony" and the ef-Strindbrg or Brieux or any of the psychological experts and dramatic ploneers who have cultivated the academic taste until it cannot enjoy plain fare; but while good roast beef and apple pie are the staple fare of Great Britain, plays of "The White Feather" description will never lose their appeal. The character drawing is not subtle but it is typical, and all the people do what they ought to do under the circumstances in which they find themselves, and they do it so cleverly and in such ingeniously new circumstances that only the blase critic and the superior persons who prefer Ibsen to Shakespere will fail to enjoy every minute of Christopher Brent's circumvention of Carl Sanderson. The play has been here before, but this will only increase the interest, for it bears seeing over again. and there is nothing so pleasant as to take a friend who has not seen a good play along with one to watch the effect upon him as he roars with laughter or sits tense with interest. who calls a spade a spade, was perhaps slightly on the side of caricature, but he did not get out of perspective. Fraulein Schroeder by Louise Mulannener was an exceedingly clever impersonation, tho the character has scarcely depth enough for striking results. Paget Hunter as Pennycuick made the most of his chance, particularly in the ejaculation when he hears about Fritz's intention. John Burkell as Fritz gave a most realistic and satisfactory rendering of the spy. Clementine Randolph was capital in her small part. Geraldine Beckwith was not so well cast as Molly, but there is nothing in Molly to attract a clever man like Brent, and Miss Beckwith is not to blame. Miriam Lee is a more attractive part and Olive Temple was very good in this role. Carl Sanderson, the German spy in transportation office of the British admiralty, was finely done by Stapelton Kent. Of course the play is flattering to our large transports. The most lively thing on the bill is many melville in her running monolog of bright sayings. to which the audience contributes a continuous laughing accompaniment.

Lulu Glaser, always a favorite with a Toronto audience, heads the bill at Shea's this week, assisted by Tom Richards, in her catchy operetts, "First Love," the chief figure in the cast appearing first as the chic maid, who wins the affections of His Majesty's doughty captain, where the charms of her unknown mistress fail to carry any message from the darks of Cupid. Latter as Blaine Hampton, the mistress, Miss Glaser completes her conquest. Mr. Richards as Captain Burnham makes a fine military figure, and sings a couple of good songs. Mr. William Glaser as General Burnham completes the cast.

"Suspicious of Hubby," a lively comedy by Lawrence Grattan, presents a general marital mix-up, arising from a reciprocity of unfounded suspicions. Many ludiculations are evolved, but all ends happily.

The most lively thing on the bill is Mary Melville in her running monolog of bright sayings. to which the audience contributes a continuous laughing

Of course the play is flattering to our national vanity, and the play might be given in Berlin with the nationalities reversed and not be far out as a truthful representation of German ideas of German people, but these will be thoughts of the day after. During the performance there is nothing but laughter and thrills and absorbing amusement.

PHOTOPLAY VERSION OF "WHITE FEATHER"
The photoplay version of the White Feather, otherwise known as "The Man Who Stayed Home," shown at the Strand Theatre, yesterday, created much interest. It will be the feature today and on Wednesday. The plot which is strong and gripping, holds the undivided attention of the audience thruout. It is very true in exposing the ways of Germans who have been living of late in the British Isles. The patriotic pictures depicting Sir Robert Borden reviewing the men of the second Canadian contingent created great interest, and were much applauded. An installment of The Goddess was presented.
