TORONTO JUNCTION.

TORONTO JUNCTION, May 23.—Mrs. Herbert of 77 Dundas-street was fined $50 and costs by Magistrate Ellis this morning for selling liquor illegal. Two of the crown constables gave evidence that they had whiskey and beer to be delivered at their homes; that Mrs. Herbert took their orders and money for it. T. L. Monaghan, for the crown, argued that Mrs. Herbert acted in contravention of the Liquor License Act. J. Haverson, for the defense, argued that Mrs. Herbert did not sell any liquor, but merely took orders from the people, and was paid a commission by the people, sent the orders to James Herbert, 22 Robinson-street, to be filled.

The charge against the three men arrested Saturday night was this morning, in their absence amended from obstructing the streets to one of disorderly conduct and further adjourned until Monday morning at 11 o'clock, in the old court house.

The charge against Frederick Ford of breaking into a C. P. R. car on May 12 and stealing four cases whiskey and two caddies tobacco, was enlarged until Monday.

The funeral of the late Edward Richards will take place on Monday and will be under the auspices of L. O. L. No. 602.

The senior Shamrocks will play in St. Thomas to-morrow, while the junior Shamrock will play in Oshawa.

FOUGHT UNDER 18 FLAGS AND DIED IN POVERTY

Gen. MacIver, a Gallant Soldier and His Extraordinary Career.

Gen. Henry Ronald Douglas MacIver of the Serbian army, who was a modern soldier of fortune, was born on Christmas Day, 1846, in Hampton Roads, Va., aboard a ship seeking a harbor. His father was Ronald MacIver, a Scotchman.

In early life he went to Italy and fought under Garibaldi. He served in the Ten Years' War in Cuba, in Crete, in Greece, twice in the Carlist revolutions in Spain, in Bosnia, and then returned to Virginia, where war on a gigantic scale was framing. His sword was offered to Gen. Robert Lee and was accepted. He fought with Stuart and Stonewall Jackson and was four times wounded during the great conflict.

At the close of the war there was much dueling between the officers of the two armies. MacIver was in one of these affairs outside of Vicksburg. His combatant was Major Tomlin of the Vermont United States Cavalry. Volunteering, they fought with swords, MacIver running his opponent thru the body and cleaning his blade with his handkerchief.

"He is dead; we must go," called one of MacIver's seconds.

A negro brought up the horses of MacIver and his second.

"My friends are in haste," said MacIver, turning to the seconds of the man he had slain. "Is there anything to be done?" he asked, "you consider this matter settled honorably."

Then he mounted and rode away.

After the Civil War MacIver, with other southern officers, went to Mexico. He fought under Maximilian there. When the fighting was over he went to Egypt and then to France, everywhere that cannon were hot and the caravans of war were plowing up the roads. MacIver was to be found in the Cretan struggle against the Turks. He was recruited more than gladly by the retreating army, and he went to Athens, and later put in a few months trying to exterminate the Grecian brigands, fighting in the mountains and doing so well at it that he was given the highest decoration that the King of Greece could confer upon him.

It was in Serbia that MacIver attained his highest rank as an officer. He received a commission from the Prince of Serbia to organize an independent cavalry brigade. He left Fleet-street, London, for Belgrade, and got busy gathering men who loved fighting. He got the right men and trained them well, commanding a legion of a thousand cavalrymen of Russo-Serbian against the Turks. He received the Cross of the Takovo Order for gallant service and was made major-general in command of all the cavalry of the Servians.

The police of the Twentieth-street station, taking an inventory of his belongings, wrote it down that the soldier of fortune, the warrior who had fought under 18 flags for the mere love of fighting, had 46 cents in cash and his clothing. If the general hastened his end, it was done so carefully that no one suspected it. "Apparent natural death," was recorded on the blotter at the station.

Gen. MacIver sought the lodging house of Mr. Campbell two months ago, coming from Washington. He had been a familiar figure in the city for years, but had gone to the capital for some purpose known only to himself. He had remained in his room for the most part since his return, but when he did greet his landlady or a fellow lodger, he was always dressed with great care.

Mrs. Campbell says:

"He was waiting for Richard Harding Davis, who has written so much about his fighting career. He was expecting Mr. Davis in a few days, and took me about it. We all knew that the old gentleman was a great soldier. He looked it."

Gen. MacIver's scant belongings consisted of uniforms, his well-cared for street clothing, and a trunk full of papers telling of his life of adventures.

NEW USE OF NONSENSE.

Lewis Carroll's Verses Give Name to a Lamp.

It may be safely asserted, without the slightest fear of contradiction, that never before in the history of science has invention gone hand-in-hand with humor. Nor, it may be as safely asserted, has a great commercial company ever derived its name from a word found in a series of nonsense verses. Yet, from the catalogue of the Brillig Light Company, of Berkeley-on-Tweed, England, it may be deduced that the name of the corporation is derived from the wonderful poem in "Alice in Wonderland," beginning:

"Twas brillig and the slithy toves,
 Did gyre and gimble in the wabe;
 All mimsy were the borogoves,
 And the mome raths outgrabe.

The exact openness of the adjective is not quite apparent, perhaps, in view of Humpty Dumpty's explanation that "brillig" means "4 o'clock in the afternoon, the time that you begin boiling things for dinner," but the name of the lamp will certainly hold the attention of the most careless reader. The brillig lamp is one designed to consume petrol. In almost all of the many varieties the petrol is contained in a receptacle at a higher level than the burner, which it consequently reaches by gravity. At the burner the petrol is converted into gas and used to heat the usual form of mantle to incandescence. There are other forms of lamp, however, in which the gas is burned as a naked flame; and one of these latter, which is said to yield a light of 20 candle-power, has the petrol contained in a receptacle, whence the liquid is drawn by a wick packed in a metal tube with a special form of mesh-work at the top.

It is said that the cost of lighting by means of the Brillig Company's new lamp is only about one-fifth of an hour for a light of 80 candle-power. This statement seems almost as wonderful as anything else Alice discovered after passing thru the looking-glass, but it is substantiated by facts and figures which appear to be indisputable. Indeed, the lamp reaches has nothing humorous about it except its name, has already been put to a severe test, having been used thruout the winter at two stations on the Northeast. These stations, like many other winter stations in England and Scotland, are constantly swept by strong winds during at least eight months of the year, but the Brillig lamp burns thruout a steady, unshakable light in the face of the severest

ACCUSED OF BIGAMY.

Hollywood Farmer Said to Have Two Wives.

KINCARDINE, May 23.—The neighborhood of Hollywood was thrown into excitement by the arrest of Wm. E. Switzer.

Switzer is a prominent farmer with a fine farm, and is well off. He is charged with bigamy. His first marriage was on March 14, 1894, when he married at Strathclair, Man., Miss Ida J. Baidrow, a daughter of John Baidrow of Ashfield, Huron County.

His second marriage is said to have taken place on Jan. 16, 1897, to Marie E. Harris of Ripley.

Switzer takes the bold stand that he is not married, and is only living with his second wife.

The preliminary trial took place this afternoon, and Switzer was committed to stand trial.
