

Heal the Lungs

A cough is frequently the only symptom of consumption manifest in the early stages. The irritation of the throat and lungs attracts the germs in the air and the deadly disease makes much progress before its presence is discovered. Unless the structure of the lungs is actually destroyed the germs may be destroyed and the affected parts healed by the use of Shiloh's Consumption Cure. Used for over half a century as a standard remedy.

The following letter is self-explanatory:

"S. C. Wells Company, Le Roy, N. Y. GENTLEMEN:—I have used Shiloh's Cough and Consumption Cure for severe coughs and sore throats, and wish to say that it has always worked like a charm, stopping my cough immediately. It is the very best of all medicines that I have ever tried, and I have tried a great many." RICHARD J. PROTHROBE, Scranton, Pa.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee that the purchase money will be refunded in case of failure. 25c, 50c, and $1 a bottle through the United States and Canada. In England, 1s, 2s, 3s, 4s, and 6d.

NOT LOVED, YET WEDDED

"She returned home, her plans formed. Taking up the clothes she carried and the child, she quitted the village secretly in the night, and went back to Montreal. You guess the rest, my lord. Fantina dressed her little girl in one of her own dresses, and on your uncle's death, your father came to fetch his niece, she gave him her own child, forcing herself to forego her maternal possession partly from fear, partly from a proud desire for her daughter's future aggrandizement."

"And," cried the earl, "did she never learn what became of my poor cousin?"

"None, my lord, that could be of any service after these long years," rejoined the priest. "All that I have told you will find written here, and properly witnessed. The substance is the same, though the picturesque, sentimental language of the poor woman, I hope, will move you, my lord, to forgive."

Putting the confession on the table he rose to leave.

Gratefully the earl thanked him for the trouble he had taken, offering him refreshment, and also his hospitality, but he remained in England; but Maria, Anselmo de Petrarra, and he returned to Italy that night.

"You will seek your cousin, my lord," he questioned.

"I will use every means money can supply," remarked the earl. "In her father's name, I owe Lady Esmeralda a deep debt of gratitude, which I can never repay—never."

He suddenly recollected his position, which at the moment he had forgotten. His face went deathly white. Was he not free-free to keep his wife, for Lucille was no wife to him?

The priest did not observe his emotion; he had turned the other way, covering himself the earl again warmly expressed his thanks, and pressed upon him his acceptance of a check for a high amount to be distributed among the poor.

It would be difficult to depict the confusion of events which had been composed since that summons to his father's death-bed!

His cousin, whom he had then vowed to wed to save his father's name from dishonor, yet lived, and within the last 24 hours he had learned that no obstacle existed to his marrying her—to his making her as he had sworn, Countess of Letherington. Could he do so, even if no other sense of repugnance existed—she an illiterate girl, a nomad, the associate of Bohemians?

His painful reflections were checked by the sound of a carriage stopping in the road beneath the windows, followed by a footman's knock. It was Lucille returned—Lucille! How little she could guess what had happened in her absence. More than before did he now shrink from meeting her.

Seated in his study chair he listened with bated breath to the light footfall ascending the stairs. His hearing was acute, he noticed a difference—then it was slow and spiritless, now it was quick and elastic. It was the step of a light heart. Could it really be she? There were certainly two.

He bent forward curiously. The steps ceased outside in the corridor. He heard a murmur of voices, then silence; then a tap at the door.

Involuntarily, not pausing to consider, he said: "Come in," and Lucille was in the room.

Not the Lucille he had looked upon last—not the heart-broken woman. There were no signs of heart-break in those bright, dancing eyes, those quivering lips and flushed cheeks. Rising, he was regarding her in amazement, when closing the door she ran towards him. "Gerard—husband!" she exclaimed, in hysterical delight; take me to your arms. I want to feel them again about me. I want to know it is real, that I am not dreaming, but that as man and wife we may yet love! Oh! my darling!"

"Lucille," he exclaimed, "what is this? Your husband? But, oh, rejoice with me, dearest—he I saw was not my husband. He whom I married died, as I believed, long ago."

"My wife!"

The earl could say no more—only his arms drew her closer, closer. Hungrily he kissed the white brow, the cheeks, the laughing lips. He was mad with this unexpected joy after the great sorrow. She was his—his after all; none lived who could rob him of her. As he pressed his lips to the bright eyes looking into his face, as he felt the heart throbbing through the slender form he held, the manuscript confession on the table, the Fra Anselmo de Petrarra's story, and the fact that his cousin, the true Lady Esmeralda yet lived, an outcast and a wanderer, were forgotten.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

When those first exultant heart-throbbings were passed, the earl eagerly questioned how Lucille had made so unexpected and happy a discovery.

Seated by his side, her little hands clasping his, her glance raised fondly to his countenance, she briefly told him. She related her acquaintance with Maria Sappont, the Italian's right, its cause, and how Lord Cecil had found her after two years' search, had seen her and been rejected; and then had informed his cousin of the Italian's address.

Only once Gerard interrupted with an amused laugh; he exclaimed: "How singular is the course taken by events. Man in his ignorance searches afar off for that which, could he but know, is in his very grasp. On the morning you mention I well recollect meeting poor Cecil, and I strongly suspect that he and I were unknowingly in search of the same person."

"You, Gerard?" remarked the countess, surprised.

"Remember, I said unknowingly," he smiled. "As I have told you after seeing you that night in the park, I was struck by your resemblance in voice, feature and carriage to yourself, that, on the spur of the moment, I followed. When I overtook your cab I was puzzled; but questioning the driver I found his face was coming back. I waited, and as I imagined, beheld you return. I again followed, when the cab stopped before a house in Percy street, Tottenham Court road. The next day—that on which I met Cecil—I made inquiries, and ascertained that the lady who had come the previous night was an Italian."

"That was Maria. After I left the cab, I recollect she made an excuse to return—it must have been to tell the man to wait. How singular indeed that you should have been in the park that very night!"

"But proceed, dearest," broke in the earl. "The greatest, most important mystery to me yet remains unelucidated."

"Today, then," went on the countess, "after what I read here, I have been harboring the hope that I might persuade Maria to accompany me abroad. I drove to Chester Square and requested to see her."

She was shown into a pleasant room opening into a small garden; here Maria speedily joined me. While we stood conversing, I perceived two persons enter the garden—one was a lady, young, pretty, graceful; the other, Gerard, was the gentleman I saw at Burlington House. I was seized by a terror I could ill disguise. Recovering myself, however, I said:

"Maria, who is that gentleman?"

"Capt. Selwyn," she replied smiling. "There is quite a romance in the history of those two. They look like lovers, do they not? but they have been married for some years. I will tell you their story; it will amuse you."

"She stopped, I fancied, rather abruptly, and fixed her eyes on my face. I could not help repeating: 'Man and wife, Capt. Selwyn,' adding involuntarily, 'not Capt. Walter Selwyn.'"

"The expression of Maria's features perplexed me still more as she repeated: 'No, not Capt. Walter, but Walsingham Selwyn. Caroline, though, told me last night that her husband had had a twin brother called Walter, who was a lieutenant in the navy! Then I was fully on my guard. Did your ladyship know him?'"

The well known poem, "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight," is in a young woman hanging to the curfew bell saves the life of her lover condemned to be executed. The ringing of the curfew is only one of a thousand striking instances of a woman's love will dare everything for love.

Women are reader to me heroic sacrifices that they are to take the commonplace, everyday precautions which insure their great happiness. Most women are careless about their health. They forget that physical weakness and disease will wreck the fairest of the body, and shut them out completely from happy womanhood and wifehood.

Weak, bilious women are robbers of their natural attractiveness and capacity. They lose healthy color and energy and ambition. The blood becomes poor and thin and laden with disease germs. The true antidote for this condition is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It acts directly upon the digestive powers and the liver, creating pure, red, healthy blood free from bilious impurities; it renovates every hard, elastic flesh and muscular strength and imparting nerve power and permanent vitality, which malt extracts do not give.

Mrs. Ella Howell, of Derby, Perry Co., Ind., writes: "In the year of 1884 I was taken with a coldness in my stomach, and a weight which seemed like a rock. Everything that I ate gave me great pain; I had a bearing down sensation; was swelled across my stomach; had a ridge around my right side, and in a short time I was bloated. I was treated by three of our best physicians but got no relief. I was so weak I could not walk across the room without assistance. Then Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended to me and I got it, and commenced the use of it. I began to improve very rapidly, and in a few bottles. The physicians said my disease was leading into pulmonary consumption, and gave me up to die. I thank God that my cure is permanent."

Mr. John Crawford, on behalf of the shareholders, expressed pleasure that the directors had acceded to his request, and had printed last year's statement, and that the step had been wisely taken, and thought that the shareholders, to a man, were exceedingly thankful for the concession. He did not see anything in the general statement to excite an opinion upon. It was very similar to that of last year, and the profits of the two years approached each other very closely. He endorsed the remarks made by the president regarding the pleasure which they saw the general manager back among them in such good health. He spoke of the Winnipeg robbery as an unfortunate occurrence, but the like of which it was extremely difficult to guard against.

Mr. S. H. Ewing made a few remarks appreciative of Mr. Crawford's satisfaction at the publishing of last year's statement along with the present one, and also fittingly alluded to the return of the general manager, after which the motion for the adoption of the report was unanimously concurred in.

Mr. John Crawford then moved: "That the thanks of the shareholders are due and are hereby tendered to the president, vice-president and directors of the bank, for their attention to its interests during the year just closed."

MOLSONS BANK

Annual Meeting of the Shareholders Monday.

Good Showing for the Year.

The Recent Robbery at the Winnipeg Branch—Old Board of Directors Re-elected.

The 43rd annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Molsons Bank was held at Montreal on Monday, the 10th. The president, Mr. W. M. Macpherson (Quebec) occupied the chair, and among those present were: Messrs. S. E. Ewing, vice-president; Henry Archibald, H. Markland Molson, J. P. Cleghorn, S. Finley, W. M. Ramsay, directors; John Crawford, John Molson, F. W. Molson, James Wilson, Geo. Copland, R. W. Shepherd, R. R. Watson, J. Try-Davies, George Durnford, Henry Barbeau, J. M. Molson, Herbert Molson, Thomas Kirby and W. R. Miller.

The president having called the meeting to order, requested Mr. James Elliot, the local manager, to act as secretary. Messrs. J. Try-Davies and R. W. Shepherd acted as scrutineers.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS. The general manager, Mr. F. Wolfertan Thomas, then read the annual report of the directors, as follows:

Montreal, 10th October, 1898. Gentlemen.—The directors beg to submit to the shareholders the forty-third annual report of the bank for the year ending 30th September.

After making full provision for bad and doubtful debts, the earnings of the year amount to $229,127, which have been applied to payment of the usual 8 per cent dividend, and 1 per cent bonus, $180,000; in deduction of bank premises account, $25,000; and balance after all other charges, $1,020 55.

All branches of the bank have been inspected once or oftener during the year.

In order to avail of the expansion of trade in our Northwest, now opening up, we have since last meeting established branches in Vancouver, Victoria and Revelstoke, in British Columbia, and at Simcoe, in Ontario. The latter have as yet not been opened, but a loss, but the board was convinced of the need of establishing these branches, not only to protect business at other points, but to avert employment for the bank's increasing trade. They have every reason to believe that their anticipations in both directions will be fully realized.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The president then said: "You have heard the annual statement for the year, which I have no doubt to satisfactory as far as it goes. A week ago we fully expected to have a better statement than this, but there is nothing certain in this world, and after we had really decided on the statement, but before it got into the hands of the printers, we received from Winnipeg a telegram advising us that the treasury of the branch there had been robbed to the extent of $20,000. This, of course, was a very distressing thing, but we are in hopes that it may not prove as serious as it appears. Of the sum taken, $12,000 are non-negotiable Dominion bills, many of them of large denomination, which will render it difficult, if not impossible for them to get into circulation, leaving $8,000 in the Molsons Bank bills. We are in close communication with the accountants, who are acting manager of the branch at the time, the manager being away on a vacation; we are also in close communication with the directors, and we feel satisfied that everything was done and that no time was lost in getting to work after the robbery was discovered. Mr. Durnford, the inspector, started within two or three hours after our receiving the advice of the robbery, and he is now in Winnipeg. The inspection of the branch took place a very few weeks before the robbery, and everything was reported as satisfactory by our inspector. The money was at the time in the treasury, and the manager, who was away for his holidays at the time of the theft, has returned to Winnipeg, and everything is being done to trace the robbers. You will all be pleased to see the general manager has been re-elected. He was elected to take a holiday, which we all know he required. I will now move the adoption of the report."

The motion was seconded by Mr. S. H. Ewing.

The general manager explained that of the money stolen from the Winnipeg branch, $25,000 consisted of five $5,000 notes, which could only pass from one bank to another; they were absolutely non-negotiable, and if a private individual had taken them, he would have been liable to arrest, because on the face of it showed that it was simply for passing from one bank to another.

A $5,000 bank note similar to those stolen from the branch at Winnipeg was passed around among the shareholders, after the general manager had read the wording upon it, showing that "this note is given only to a bank to which the bank act of Canada applies, and will be redeemed only when presented by one of such banks."

"That," remarked the general manager, "I think, pretty accurately defines who is entitled to use those notes."

THE DISCUSSION.

Mr. John Crawford, on behalf of the shareholders, expressed pleasure that the directors had acceded to his request, and had printed last year's statement, and that the step had been wisely taken, and thought that the shareholders, to a man, were exceedingly thankful for the concession. He did not see anything in the general statement to excite an opinion upon. It was very similar to that of last year, and the profits of the two years approached each other very closely. He endorsed the remarks made by the president regarding the pleasure which they saw the general manager back among them in such good health. Mr. S. H. Ewing made a few remarks appreciative of Mr. Crawford's satisfaction at the publishing of last year's statement along with the present one, and also fittingly alluded to the return of the general manager, after which the motion for the adoption of the report was unanimously concurred in.

Mr. John Crawford then moved: "That the thanks of the shareholders are due and are hereby tendered to the president, vice-president and directors of the bank, for their attention to its interests during the year just closed."
