German officials in causing the outbreak of the great war, resumes his testimony today.

While on the stand yesterday, Count von Bernstorff told of the efforts made by President Wilson in 1914 and 1916 to find a way to bring peace proposals before the allied governments. German peace tentatives, made from time to time, however, handicapped Mr. Wilson, in the opinion of the former ambassador, being construed by the allies as evidence of weakness on the part of Germany. It was Count von Bernstorff's impression that Mr. Wilson intended to propose a temporary peace which would not touch on the territorial issues and would leave major problems connected with peace to a conference of belligerents. In 1916, the witness said, President Wilson was in a position to propose "peace without victory," but he declared, Mr. Wilson deferred action because of the sentiment against Germany in the United States at that time.
