The Boxing Bout

Larner, putting the Hamilton sent in a hard right to his opponent's jaw, still scores spread until almost the whole of my head was affected. As the doctor's treatment did me very little good I left it off and tried various home remedies. I also tried taking various aperient medicines to try and cure the outbreak through the blood. Still it was vain!

NEW PRESIDENT KICKED AT ADVANCE TO STEWART

Made It Clear to the Directors That They Were Responsible For Notes.

Aemilius Jarvis, who assumed the presidency of the Sovereign Bank on May 1, 1907, took the stand in the non-jury assize court yesterday, in the action brought by Curator Stewart against the directors. It was previous to his taking office that the loan was obtained from the Morgans.

"When did you first learn of the purchase of stock by bank's own money?" "On 10th of April, 1907, when I was asked to take the presidency of the bank," Cassels, he said, told him about the purchasing of the stock. He then was informed by Morgans that he had securities from the directors.

"The money, he said, had been used to take up the loan from the Trust Co. He had objected to the advance of $48,000 to Stewart, and to Mr. McDonnell also, for having initiated the cheque.

Referring to the memorandum of the agreement, he said that Senator McMillan had declared it was a scheme to round them all up and make them pay up.

As to the notes given by directors for the stock, Mr. Hellmuth said: "They made it quite clear to you that they were under no obligation and that those notes were merely nominal. Is that so?"

"It was the other way around, Mr. Jemmett and I made it clear to them quite sure that every officer was responsible for this action and was liable for any losses to the bank. He said that he and Messrs. Morgan and Cassels had admitted that the names in which the stock was held were more or less bogus and that the stock had really been purchased with the bank's own money.

The bank, therefore, had no one who would be responsible for the stock and repay the bank. In his opinion, he was quite sure that every officer was responsible for this action and was liable for any losses to the bank. He said that he and Messrs. Morgan and Cassels had admitted that the names in which the stock was held were more or less bogus and that the stock had really been purchased with the bank's own money.

He stated that in July he learned from the new manager and from an investigation of the bank, that the stock had not been taken over by one. He handed the bond to Mr. Jarvis and Mr. Bruce, pointing out that the contents had been changed and asked him to see it was carried out.

Altho the bond, he said, was binding on the directors, the Dredner people wanted the $400,000, which the bank was short of, and they did not consider the bond security at all. They thought everyone of the directors was responsible for the loss of $400,000, which they thought was theirs.
