Two Achievements.

Now that the military service bill has passed the commonsense and sure of passing the senate, the air is already clearer. So great is the virtue of getting things done.

The passing of the military service bill has been followed by the income tax proposals of Sir Thomas White. They are not radical and are nothing like as severe as those which are in force in Britain. But if they are effectively imposed we believe that the people of Canada will be satisfied with the result.

Sir Thomas White spoke of the expense of collecting income tax. The real difficulty is in getting hold of the shirkers. The local assessors should be able to give able assistance in this respect everywhere. Many men are unpatriotic enough to omit paying income tax altogether. Some of them even seem to think that it is a smart and laudable trick. It is the same attitude of mind that refuses military service. But conscription of both service and income is a necessity in a nation so fully pledged and committed to the war as Canada.

The tax only affects incomes over $2000 for single, and over $3000 for married men. A married man with $60 a week will pay $4.80 tax. With $75 a week the tax will be $6. With $100 a week the tax will be $8. This 4 per cent rate applies up to $6000 a year income, at which amount the tax would be $120. None of these amounts are burdensome.

A surtax applies over $6000 a year income. The man with $10,000 will pay $200, which will not be regarded as sufficient by those who earn less. The tax on a $20,000 income will be $700. The tax on a $30,000 income will be $1500; on $50,000, $2800; on $100,000, $11,000; on $200,000, $28,000; and on $500,000, $136,000. The larger figures are substantial. Corporations will pay four per cent on their income.

To Unify Canada.

What remains to be done to solidify Canada as a nation domestically is to nationalize the railways, beginning with the proposals contained in the Aeworth-Drayton report.

Nothing else would give the whole country such a real sense of national consciousness as to see the C. G. Railway cars on every road, to travel in the C. G. trains, and to understand the linking up of province with province, the joining of ocean with ocean, by the enterprise, not of private interests, but of the whole Canadian people.

It is an inevitable corollary of the success of the Intercolonial under independent and non-political management; of the splendid results attained by the Ontario Government Railway in opening up the clay belt and the mines of Cobalt and Porcupine; and lastly by the success of the hydro-electric system in Ontario, which offers the opportunity to electrify the government-owned railways in Ontario and supply them with the cheapest power on earth.

The corporations naturally fight against the idea, but it must be as an economic measure, as a business necessity, and as an essential means of national unification. It is not so much a question of drawing the provinces together, as of making the people of Canada one. The greatest common interest they can achieve is the ownership of their own railways. Every month's delay in carrying out the policy delays to that extent the solidarity of the Dominion.

Corporation Leave to Litigate.

Mayor Church is of the opinion that if the privy council has found any flaw in the hydro-electric legislation concerning the Chippewa development plans, the government will call a special session of the legislature at once and supplement the deficiencies of the act if necessary, or pass further legislation.

The government cannot do otherwise than support the hydro policy to its utmost. The hydro commission is equally within its rights with any other electric company at Niagara, for it represents the municipalities, which have as good a claim to consideration as any private company. And if a private company's rights are more important the commission possesses them also by virtue of its purchase of the Ontario Power Co.

The sovereign power of the people is in no final danger of being overthrown, but there is great temporary risk of that sovereign power being whittled down and girt about with impediments by the encroachments of corporation privilege. It is the new breed of corporation tendencies that form which autocratic tendencies in a small body of men. A small corporation can be much more crafty and altogether as autocratic as any kaiser. In fact, corporations are now to rights and privileges which would be refused the monarch himself. The lawyers, who created the corporations, are inclined to look kindly on their unnatural offspring. They would endow them with powers that would be denied to a man. Ontario cannot afford to permit these legal creations to dominate the wishes and the rights of the citizens. The privy council may take a complacent view of the corporation application for a flat, but this does not necessarily concede any weakness in the people's case. There may be litigation and expensive litigation, and appeals carried from court to court, and finally to the foot of the throne, but the municipalities of Ontario cannot be deprived of their right to develop power at Chippewa or anywhere else, and they were never bound to refrain from doing so by any act of any government of the province.

Daylight Saving.

An unsatisfactory conclusion to the debate on the daylight saving bill does not necessarily mean the defeat of the measure. It was not proposed to bring it into operation until next spring, when the United States will adopt the plan. What strikes one most in the objections brought to it is the somewhat childish and prejudiced nature of most of them. Mr. Nesbitt, for example, asked if the roosters could be prevented from crowing, as if that had anything to do with the scheduling of the day's work. Even Sir Wilfrid Laurier objected that it would be attempting by legislation to deceive ourselves. People are not deceived who know what they are doing and why.

Mr. Turfitt objected that under daylight saving children would get up an hour earlier. Young children always wake up like birds at "unearthly hours," and it will be an advantage to parents when they wake up at 4 or 5 in the morning to find that, according to the new time, it is really 5 or 6.

Mr. Nesbitt seemed to be under the impression that the farmers would be inconvenienced by the change. Possibly farmers who do not understand the matter may raise objections, but when they see the effect they will rejoice as farmers have done in other parts of the world. The hired man may object, but why the farmer could object, even Mr. Nesbitt did not explain.

When the United States puts the measure into operation, next spring and Canada finds herself on hour behind the time in everything, railways, telegraphs, telephones, mails, shipping, newspaper service, the present objections to the bill will have some explaining to do. The wisest course for the government to take would be to pass the bill with the stipulation that it be acted upon by order-in-council in co-operation with the United States when that government arranges to bring the plan into force.

After the first day nobody would know the difference, except for the lengthened evenings. Mr. Carvell was skeptical about the saving that would result. He should study the British statistics on this point. Canada would save hundreds of thousands under the scheme, and it is rather a faddist tendency that would throw away such sums rather than adopt the means of saving them.

OTHER PEOPLE'S OPINIONS

The Toronto World invites correspondence on subjects of current interest. Letters must be short and to the point—not more than 200 words at the outside. The editor reserves the right to cut any letters to make them conform to space requirements. Names will not be published if the writers wish them withheld, but every letter must be signed with writer's name and address, to ensure authenticity.

Smaller Loaf Needed.

Editor World: On behalf of those whose families, like my own, consist of but two or three members, may I offer a suggestion as regards the saving of bread? Why could not the bakers make a smaller loaf than the one used at present, to retail at say six cents? In this damp weather it is almost impossible to bake a one and one-half pound loaf before it molds, even with scrupulous care of the bread box. If a smaller size could be purchased this waste would be eliminated. Economic Housewife.

SECRETS OF HEALTH AND HAPPINESS HOW THE TEMPERATURE OF YOUR BODY FOLLOWS THE AIR

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A.B., M.A., M.D. (Johns Hopkins University)

DR. HIRSHBERG

Oh, doctor, I have such a fever! This is common enough expression, but is not always founded on truth. To "guess" that you are feverish because you feel hot or appear to appear "flushed up with fever" is more often a bad guess than a good one. Only the "little stick of glass" stuck under the tongue, in the arm pit, or in some other fold of the flesh will accurately inform you whether your blood and tissues are unbalanced or not in their intake and expenditure of heat.

When you are "bale and hearty," that is, in the condition recognized as health, the mercury in the little thermometer will on the average hover between 98 and 98.6 Fahrenheit. This is called the "body temperature." It varies, not only when you are ill, but rhythmically in the liveliest day. It is at its lowest temperature, about 97.2 of the morning, between 2 and 6 o'clock, and it increases as the day wears. Between 2 and 6 in the afternoon, it is at its highest. It may then again fall at night.

Your temperature commonly varies according to the garments you wear, as well as from the temperature and dryness of the external surroundings, and the degree of heat or cold around you.

Nevertheless, despite these trivial fractional changes of temperature, no great variation from the normal temperature of 98 to 98.6 can take place without serious results. Unless superficially, the body is eliminated, co-ordination of work by the tissues as well as individual damage to the human fabric is likely to follow.

There is evidently a "best" or "optimum" temperature for the various intellectual and physical activities of plants, animals, bacteria, and man. Very few of these have as yet been investigated thoroughly, except for mankind.

Human creatures in health on the average seem to work best physically when the outside air is 60 deg. Fahrenheit.

The "Best" Temperature. For thought and judgment, for mental activity in general, any outdoor air temperature of 40 deg. has been found by Dr. William H. Burnham to be the best.

To be sure, the "optimum" temperature in different kinds of work and play, intellectual or physical, differs accordingly. The more complex and intelligent the animal in its species the lower appears its optimum temperature. Thus, the bird, in its activity the lower, appears the optimum. Mathematics, for instance, as such additional, requires a lower outdoor temperature, say 30 deg. than does loading a ton of hay on a wagon.

When the temperature of the air is less than what is best for the effort put forth, power, skill and efficiency fall off proportionately, and you feel more and more enervated. This explains why the mind of the muscles worker seeks "the shade of the sheltering palms" in the noonday heat, and the glow and warmth of his room when the cold, damp and moist shades of night are falling thru.

With the "blood temperature" above the best, the activity of the tissues increases and becomes unequal to the task of a full removal of waste products and accumulated poisons. Mental and physical activities, then, slow up and exhaustion creeps on apace.

In its influence upon comfort, happiness and health, mental and physical, temperature and moisture seem to play very important parts. Climatic effects are in part traceable to them.

Feasors in colleges, primary school teachers, men in business, and women in old, young, high and low, rich and poor—every one of them just simply loves to say he "perfectly first." There's something in the word that makes you believe you really are "perfectly first"—isn't there, now?

Poor me! I was lost. The college girl made me say "yes," before I knew what I was saying. She should have looked so pretty when she asked me, should she?

Why, only yesterday I had denied myself to my young man in my house who said "well," and there I sat, ready to sponsor "perfectly first." Oh, this was indeed a dreadful state of affairs!

An Evidence of Progress? Of course, among the grown-ups who know just when and where to use a word, the use of "perfectly first" is the famous old "touch of nature" for making "the whole world skin." But for the young folks I wonder—I wonder

"Don't go so far away and leave me," exclaimed the college girl. "You're so perfectly first I hate to have you forgetting back to the realm of your girlhood when you're having tea with me. Tell me, now, honest-to-goodness, don't you think you'd be quite impossible if you lived up exactly to the rules your father laid down for your English so long ago? I do."

"Well, perhaps you are right," I said, "but I am not going to let you bow me over completely in this slang business, just because I'm so fond of you. I put on Life's Harness that night I lay in my little bed and meditated over the loss of my favorite dessert when you were having tea with me. Believe I've felt the weight of the harness far less than you will when you have to wear one, and the bit in my mouth I securely hate!"

"Yes, I've quite made up my mind to stick to the old 'perfectly first' in my household," said the little person who can get the tongue curbing habit that way and never realize they're wearing a bridge and bit at all, as we say. "I love so much I will have to be harassed and I must see you champing and champing at the bit."

"There, you dear, you perfectly first person—don't you fret about my future punishments. I'll take them all, just as I sling slang—for all I am worth. Please pass me the biscuits."

And we drank tea and we ate the dainty biscuits and we talked of late books and the newest gowns, and when I left the college girl I was full of her gay exuberance and felt as near as ever I could to being perfectly first.

ANNUAL MEETING POSTPONED.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association has been postponed until next year. But in the meantime the work of the association will be continued. Postponement was decided on because of the seriousness of the war situation and the probability of a general election in the near future, requiring the attention of the members of the bar.

TRENCH STRAIN EASED

Troops Seldom in Front-Line Trenches Longer Than Eight Days.

By Stewart Lyon.

Canadian Headquarters, France, June 21.—(Correspondence)—In some of the comments on conditions here at the front there are to be found statements which indicate a greater lack of knowledge concerning those conditions than one would naturally expect after almost three years of war.

Millions of letters have been written home by young Canadians serving in France and Flanders. The information in many of these letters is negligible. Some times there is a disposition to draw the long bow, as in a recent case where a man far from the front, engaged in sorting of salvage, assured his home folk that between shelling and dodging Boche bombs he was having a lively time, but one got accustomed to it after a while. In still other cases of which I have heard young fellows in daily peril ignored that side of their life altogether out of a chivalrous desire to lessen the strain upon the loving mother to whom their letters were sent.

Relieved Regularly. Notwithstanding these references and exaggerations, enough exact information should have entered into the minds of the Canadian soldiers, or any others, hold their lines for long periods without relief or rest beyond the range of the enemy's guns in the earlier stages of the war when Germany's available man power was much greater on the western front than that of France and Britain, it was necessary to keep the infantry in the front line that is, actually holding the trenches and liable to attack at any moment of the day or night, for periods of two weeks at a time. In support still well within field gun range, it was not uncommon to keep battalions for a month or more. There was one period during which all Canadian battalions in the line and in support were subject to all the hazards of war for several months, without any rest periods. Only the urgent necessity of those days justified the subjecting of large bodies of men to such an incessant strain.

As the use of artillery increased and the use of heavy caliber guns became more frequent, the need for more frequent rest periods for the men holding the line increased. The soldier now stays in the front line for more than eight days. Often an even shorter "tour" is arranged. Sometimes an entire division, after a trying time, is taken back to rest billets for lengthy periods of recuperation.

Rest Billets a Paradise. Rest billets are a sort of terrestrial paradise for the men who are lucky enough to spend a month in them. One is awakened there long before reveille by the horn of the small boy or girl, who calls out "Anglies papers, M'sieur, tuppence each." The voices of women and children are heard again, and the soldier is up and about at all, and a faint rumble in the distance—a noise insufficient to disturb the nerves of the most "jumpy."

It must not be supposed that rest billets are places where all play and no work make Jack Canuck easy. He is kept in condition by physical drill, bayonet instruction, musketry exercises, and visits to the rifle ranges or perhaps at the trench mortar or bombing school. He is given opportunity for shower baths, such as cannot be provided nearer the front, and, if specially fortunate, may even be able to have a swim in running water, or convenient pond. Whatever their duties the men in reserve or in rest billets have a good deal of leisure, and are kept in condition by physical drill, bayonet instruction, musketry exercises, and visits to the rifle ranges or perhaps at the trench mortar or bombing school.
