

JANUARY.

On the 21st of this month the Sun enters Aquarius, the eleventh sign of the Zodiac, so called from water, because it generally brings rain. This constellation is represented by the figure of a man pouring out water from an urn. The Mythology is as follows:—Gany-mede, son of Troas, King of Troy, was taken by Jupiter, in the form of an eagle to Heaven, as he was tending his father's flock, on Mount Jela, and became cup-bearer to the Gods instead of Hebe.

Recipe to prevent the feet of horses balling with snow.—If the frog in the hoofs of horses and the fetlock be cleaned, and well rubbed with soft soap, previously to their going out in snowy weather, it will effectually prevent their falling, from what is termed balling the snow. A number of accidents might be prevented by this simple precaution.

January will set in this year with clear cold weather, which may be expected to last several days,—about the middle of the month soft weather, with occasional falls of snow,—towards the end of the month, severe frost,—on the 28th, the glass will stand at 27½ below zero.
