A RADIO RANGE OF 1,500 MILES

(New York Evening Post)
A powerful radio-telephone sending set that can carry the voices of President Harding and other high government officials to all parts of the Eastern and Middle Western United States is being installed in the naval radio station at Arlington, near Washington. Within a few weeks it is expected that Arlington will start a regular broadcasting programme on a wave length of 2,650 metres with this new telephone set.
Heretofore this large radio station, which has day and night, for years kept official Washington in touch with its navy and other outlying government functions, has not had radio-telephone equipment.
The installation of the radio telephone became known only because of test messages that have been sent. It is declared that these messages were received perfectly as far away as New Orleans and Bar Harbor, Me. Officials estimate that the ordinary range of the station will be about 1,500 miles, but it is expected that it will be possible to receive its broadcasting at much greater distances.

THE RIGHT KIND OF

While no definite information can be obtained, it has been intimated that Arlington with this new equipment will be the broadcasting centre for important governmental announcements, such as presidential addresses before Congress, and it is even possible that the proceed-
