FOCH SAYS ALLIES LOST FULL VICTORY

Marshal Says They Failed to Exploit Their Advantage Completely—His Notes to Clemenceau.

Parish, Nov. 10.—That when the conditions of the armistice gave them the power to impose upon Germany whatever peace terms they judged fit, the allied governments failed to exploit their victory fully is the burden of a long interview given on Sunday by Marshal Foch to Jules Sauerwein of Le Matin on the way to Amiens, whither the Marshal was proceeding to attend the memorial services to the Australians who fell in France.

Seated in the same saloon carriage in which he received the German delegates when they came to sue for an armistice on Nov. 11, 1918, Marshal Foch sketched the circumstances under which the suspension of hostilities was concluded.

"An armistice," he said, "is a cessation of hostilities whose object is to put the governments which consent to grant it in a position to impose the peace they choose. Did the armistice which I signed on Nov. 11, 1918, fulfill these conditions? Say it did as on June 19, 1919, seven months after it was signed, Germany accepted all the Allies' peace terms. I had told M. Clemenceau on Armistice Day: 'My work is over; yours now begins. Draft the peace, you like, I will guarantee to impose it.'"

Marshal Foch went on to describe how, when Dr. Erzberger and General von Winterfeldt pleaded for the immediate cessation of hostilities, he replied that he had given his orders for the allied armies to advance for three days more, and no pleadings by the Germans would make him change those orders. When finally the Germans arrived to sign, he consented to reduce his terms only so far as to allow them 5,000 machine guns and a certain number of motor trucks so as to maintain order in Germany.

Turning to the peace which followed the armistice, Marshal Foch said that later, when the view grew upon him that the proposed peace was not what he considered a wise one, he had written a series of notes to Premier Clemenceau demanding the military occupation of the Rhine until the complete execution of all the terms of the treaty. President Poincare supported him in this view.

New Cue Record.

All speed laws were violated in Brooklyn when Charley Peterson, fancy shot expert of St. Louis, gave his super-six billiard stroke its second public workout in an attempt to count 1,000 points in five minutes. He failed by a couple of clock ticks to attain his objective, but counted the unprecedented total of 1,020 points in five minutes and forty seconds. This is at the rate of three points a second, or 180 points a minute.

A PRISON DE LUXE.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—The most oddly constructed prison in the world is at St. Azul, It is in the form of a cylinder, and a slight curve in the skylight, giving every one of the 248 cells, which do not get sunlight, direct, ninety minutes of sunlight on every bright day. It is a prison de luxe, for every cell has a wash bowl with hot and cold water.
