The present season for lobster fishing has been a remarkably poor one, but fishermen who have been lucky enough to catch even a few have made a good sum out of their labor. In New York and Boston they have been dear eating and those who had them on their bill-of-fare paid as high as 65 cents a pound, which would mean that an average lobster would cost 80 or 90 cents. Of course, if they could be had for local consumption, fish dealers say, the cost would only be half that amount. The cold and stormy weather is said to be the cause of the scarcity.

The exploits of the world-famous "Buffalo" Jones, the peer of cowboys, and his well known band of the latter, while in Africa, are common property with those who are in the habit of keeping in touch with affairs. When he caught with a lasso the wildest of animals, such as the giraffe, rhinoceros, zebra, puma, and a score of other ferocious rare beasts, the moving picture man was not far away, and in 2,000 feet of film at the Gem Theatre next Monday and Tuesday the daring, and sensational at acts of Col. Jones and his cowboys in the "dark continent" will be shown on canvas for the first time in St. John, and the feature is announced as the best of its kind ever presented in this city. There will be other features as well.
