surface, so that gradually as time went on he grew to look more and more like a great white-furred animal.

The driving here on the open river was comparatively easy. Except occasionally the straight line was adhered to. When it became necessary to avoid an obstruction, Sam gave the command loudly, addressing Billy as the lead dog.

"Hu, Billy!" he would cry. And promptly Billy would turn to the right. Or "Chac, Billy!" he would cry. And Billy would turn to the left, with always in mind the thought of the long whip to reach his duty to man.

Then the other dogs turned after him. Claire, for her steadiness and sense, had been made sledge dog. Always she watched sagaciously to pull the sled and the sledge steadily away should the deviation not prove sufficient.

Later, in the woods, when the trail should become difficult, much would depend on Claire's leadership. Now shortly, far to the south, the sun rose. The gray world at once became brilliant.

The low frost haze, inevitable until now, all the rest of the day—for these few moments of the level beams worked strange metamorphoses. A million ice drops on shrubs, a prism of a beam, a bewildering flash and gleam of jewels caught the eye in every direction.

And, suspended in the air, like the shimmer of a soft and delicate veiling, waivered and floated a mist of vapor, tinted with rose and lilac, with smoky and saffron tints.

As always on the Long Trail, our travellers' spirits rose with the sun. Dick lengthened his stride, the dogs leaped to their collars, Sam gave back his shoulders, the girl swung the sledge tail with added vim.
