sepular idea that habitual oriminals are minly the product of great cities. In Manchester, no doubt, 16 out of every 10,000 belong to that class, and in Liver-pool 11; but in London there are only 4, and in Taunton, alcepiest of little towns, they rise to 17. Of course the st figure may be accidental, but the roportion of crime, though not, of reportant of crime, mough noc, or ourse, the aggregate mass of crime, in condon has always been low, partly rom the vigilance of the police, partly rom the number of earsers open to the selligence which is only generated in act cities. We wish one of our abler ists would give the world a careful gnity, in particular, such as fire , flourish chiefly in rural districts and petty towns, as do also rapes and all crimes of violence not dictated by a wish to obtain property.-London Spec

s wife, it is worth while to inquire how s Turk treats her. She has much to complain of generally from the ill-treatment of her husband. As a fulc the Furk is a fair husband. The Turk in position. As husband and wife see little of each other, they are not specially given to quarrelling. But the is a woman, possibly purchased outright in the slave-market—for it is pure illusion to suppose that the slave trade in Turkey has been abolished—and being a woman, she bears about her on every hand the marks of degradation. It is her duty to wait on her husband, if he ALLEN'S be poor, at meals. Her accommodation in the house is inferior to his. In all things she is a slave. If the wife is the daughter of a wealthy man, her lot is not a hard one. As the law regards marriage merely as a partnership, she keeps her own property, and the husband has to be on his good behavior to obtain a share of it. If she is of poor R very Doctor recommen origin, she can scarcely be said to have any rights. When a harem is on board a vessel, the husband keeps in the salcon living well and sleeping in a comfortable cabin. The poor women are penned up as deck-passengers, living on wretched food which they take with them.— "Only a few weeks ago," says a travaller, "I was in a steamer carrying a harem, where there were probably twenty women, wives and alaves, who were shivering under canvas, which was quite insufficient to keep out the pelting ain. I know that it is a thing almo unknown for a harem to have cabins taken for it. The husband takes care of himself—has, perhaps, unlimited champagne—and leaves his women huddled together on deck to take care of Thiblistic, as well as for Deep sented Con

WHAT OATHRAL DORS .- Liebig has shown that oatmeal is almost as nutri-tious as the very best English beef, and that it is richer than wheaten bread in the elements that go to form bone and muscle. Prof. Forbes, of Edinburgh, during some twenty years, measured breath and height and also tested the strength of both the arms and loins of the students of the university—a very numerous class, and of various nationalities, drawn to Edinburgh by the fame of his teaching. He found that in height, breadth of chest and shoulders, and strength of arms and loins, the Belgians were at the bottom of the list; a little above them, the French; very much higher, the English; and highest of all, Scotch and Scotch-Irish

Space forbids the giving more here. from Ulster, who, like the natives of Scotland, are fed in their early years with at least one meal a day of good oatmeal porridge. A STRAK TERR CUTTER. A steam tree-cutter is the latest invention. Capital and Labor describes some recent experiments in which a new ma-chine for felling timber was successfully tested. The instrument consists of a cylinder and piston, the rod of which is directly connected with a strong saw blade working horizontally. The cylin-der rests on a solid framework or foundation which is fixed in the ground close to the tree, and the blade is kept in its place by firm chains attached to the trunk to be operated upon. A supply of steam is, of course, provided, and when everything is in position the and when everything is in position the engine is started and works itself. A very few minutes are said to have been occupied in cutting through the largest tree, and it is plain that if the success achieved was conclusive, the new saw must come into general use.
