

BANKER SLIDER'S CASE.

Billy Haven was no ordinary burglar. His theory was that if a man wished to make a success of his profession he needed to use his brain rather than his muscle. It was all right enough, when starting out to commit a burglary, to take a knife with you, or a loaded club, or a pistol, but Billy claimed that the doing of this showed a lack of mental ingenuity. Any muscular fool can bludgeon the senses out of a half-awakened householder aroused from his first deep sleep by the noise entering of a thief through the kitchen window, but bludgeoning, Billy looked upon as clumsy and unnecessary. The consequence was that Billy, by strict attention to business and the endeavor to please customers, soon began to build up for himself an enviable reputation among the police. They never caught sight of Billy or his pals, but they always recognized his handwriting by the neatness and dexterity of it. It did not even know his name, but they called him among themselves Billy Haven, out of respect for the memory of a detective of that name, who was especially good at tracking crimes of a kind whose origin was obscure and the clue to which was not visible.

They said among themselves, when their attention was first directed to the kind of burglary the new burglar was doing, that this was a job Billy Haven would like the unraveling of it to be alive, and so they drifted on, never getting a sight of Billy Haven, and finally the unknown cracksmen came to be called Billy Haven. As a general thing, where Billy Haven was at work, the inmates of the house never knew a robbery had been committed until next morning. Billy and his gang left almost no trace of their visit except the disappearance of the most valuable things in the residence. At last these neat burglaries ceased, and there were no traces of Billy for years. It is probable that the authorities would never have known any particulars about Billy's career, if it had not been that a convict dying in one of the prisons told about Billy's last and successful coup, which enabled Haven and his gang to retire into respectable, but monotonous private life.

Billy, it seems, had long looked with hungry eyes on a large amount of money, and he was entirely surrounded by a high brick wall, and Billy felt that if he and his mates ever got inside that mansion they could work in uninterrupted security. Inquiry showed Billy that it was the residence of Mr. Slider, the well known banker; a man intimately connected with numerous prosperous companies, and a man of great private wealth. The name of Slider was a power in the city. Billy's investigations led him to the knowledge that Mr. Slider was a most careful man, who had arranged every electrical appliance then known for the discovery of a burglar. He appeared to realize that if once a burglar got entrance into a big house, the family would be, comparatively speaking, at his mercy, and so it was that every window was protected by half a dozen different devices. The door-mats and windows were so arranged that almost everybody went to bed the lightest footfall on any of them all the electric lamps in the house would ring a large bell in the tower; would telegraph a warning to the nearest police station, and would set more gongs ringing all over the place than a burglar who was at all nervous cared to hear.

Billy realized, then, that the ordinary methods of a burglar would have a tendency to fail if applied to the big house standing in its own exclusive grounds, and so he resolved when he and his pals entered the house it would be by the door, and not by one of the windows, and it would be at a time when the family had not retired to rest. Billy's plans, when matured, were very simple. He obtained the costume of a police inspector for himself, and the clothes of an ordinary policeman for each of his four pals. He got likewise, a very good imitation of the name of Mr. Slider. Billy was the man of brains in the gang, and the other four, realizing this, did exactly as he told them. They were in a perfect state of discipline, and had the utmost confidence in Billy's ingenuity. The plan was this: They were to enter the house in the evening, in perfect legal form; the inspector was to arrest Mr. Slider, who might, of course, be indignant, but the conspirators expected that the respect a banker has for the forms of law at least secured submission under protest; and while the inspector stood guard over the arrested man, two of the alleged policemen were to be posted so that no one could leave the house, even if Mr. Slider wanted to send a messenger away, which was not likely, because of his certainty that this was a mistake, which would easily be corrected. The other two could easily be posted so that they could search the house under the protection of a bogus search warrant, and quietly secrete all the valuables and money that they could lay their hands on. The inspector then intended to tell Mr. Slider that, because of his protests, he would not take him to jail, but that he must understand that he was under arrest, and that he might have to report to the head officer when called upon to do so. Billy imagined that the time which must intervene before the news of the unwarranted arrest reached the real police would give him all the opportunity he wanted to cover his tracks and secrete his spoil.

This plan worked admirably up to a certain point, when Billy and his pals were treated to a stupifying surprise. The man at the porter's lodge tremblingly admitted the officers of the law into the grounds. He was then ordered to lock the gates, which he did, and one of the policemen took the key and remained in the porter's lodge with the man and his wife, who were certainly very much frightened. Another policeman was left to guard the entrance of the house, while the bogus inspector and the remaining policeman rang at the front door. The person who admitted them was also arrested at the sight of their uniforms. Billy asked if Mr. Slider was at home, and was informed that he was in the drawing-room. He then asked that he and the officers might be shown there without being announced.

Mr. Slider was sitting in an easy-chair surrounded by his family. He turned his head round when the door opened without

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

And of Course, as is Generally the Case, He Found Out.

Morphine Prescribed as a Last Resort in a Desperate Case.

But a Much More Effective Remedy Was Discovered in the End.

"How is it that the Hawker Medicine Co. and their pills and tonic and rheumatism cure, cough and cold cure and other remedies are so much talked about all over the provinces?" was the query of a gentleman the other day.

"If I complain of a cold, I am advised to try Hawker's tonic. If I say I run down, Hawker's tonic is shouted at me. I feel a twinge of rheumatism, I am instructed to lay on Dr. Manning's German Remedy. If I am unfortunate enough to allude to my liver, Hawker's liver pills are put under my nose. If I speak of cholera, I am told that a man who builds himself up with Hawker's tonic and pills can ward off to his neck in cholera morbus. Why is this?"

In answer to this question the secret of the success of the Hawker Medicine Co.'s standard remedies may be illustrated by the following story which was told to a reporter on Friday. The narrator was Mrs. Mowry, wife of Capt. Justus Mowry, the well-known tugboat officer. The interview took place at her pleasant residence, Prince William street, whether a reporter went in company with Manager Russell. If any reader of this story has been or should be in the future subjected to the parent extremity of taking morphine for relief from the horrible pains of indigestion in its worst form, Mrs. Mowry's experience will be of the deepest interest and incalculable value.

The story may be briefly told. Mrs. Mowry was for two years a horrible sufferer from chronic indigestion. She could not sleep without the use of morphine. Her stomach was so weak that she could scarcely eat any kind of food without suffering immediate pain. In fact she seemed to have pains and aches all over her body, and became so nervous and weak and prostrated by her household duties. She tried a great many medicines and the doctors were prescribing for her nearly all the time, but she could get no relief. Sometimes for 24 hours at a time her suffering from cramps were without arousing suspicion, and if that could not be done, I would have had to come some other time."

"Precisely. Now what will you take in gold to go back to the station and report that you have not been able to find me?" "That would be a dangerous business," said Billy, quite honestly. "Give me a start of twenty-four hours and that is all I ask. Now, how much?"

"What do you say," he said at last, "to five thousand for me and three thousand apiece for each of the men?" "That would be seventeen thousand in all," said the banker.

"Well," said Billy, "suppose we make it twenty thousand as a lump sum; or, rather, as you wish twenty-four hours, I think, as time is valuable in a case like this, a thousand an hour would not be exorbitant. If you say twenty-four thousand in gold, it's a go."

"That is a large amount," said the banker. "Oh, very well, then," replied Billy. "We have only to do our duty. You are not absent; you are here. The amount is large, as you say, but you must remember that the risk is tremendous."

"Yes, I admit that," said the banker with a sigh; "but you said you would take twenty thousand or even seventeen thousand as a moment ago."

"There are no men to square, beside myself," answered the inspector, "and if one of them objected of course the game would be up. I shall not take the risk even of mentioning it to them for anything less than twenty-four, and if I think any longer about it I shall raise the price to thirty."

"I agree to the $24,000," said the banker hastily. "Can you make sure of your men-of-their silence?" "Reasonably sure," answered Billy. "The only question is, can we have the money in gold, here and now?"

"I am not sure that I can give you all that amount in gold, but I think I can," said the inspector, "I have a pocketbook he had with him and added some figures together."

"Yes," he said, "I can do it."

"Very well," said Billy, "it is a bargain."

Billy called his pals, and together they accompanied the banker to another place that contained a large safe, which Slider opened, and took out several bags, and gave them down a pair of scales from the top of the safe, saying: "You may weigh this, and you will find it correct. There are five bags here and they each contain $5,000."

"Open all the bags," said Billy, cautiously. The banker did so, and Billy ran a handful of gold from each of them through his fingers and found everything correct.

"How much does a thousand weigh?" he asked the banker, and on receiving his answer, placed one of the bags in the scales. "It is a pity to break bulk," said Billy.

"Very well," answered the banker. "Suppose you call your men in. I wish to be sure that you will keep your compact."

The four men were speedily inside the room, and their eyes opened as they saw the glitter of the gold. The inspector briefly detailed to the points of the bargain while the banker looked from man to man and listened anxiously.

"You agree to this?" said Billy, and each of the men nodded.

"You will have no further trouble from us," Mr. Slider, said Billy Haven, politely. "At least, for twenty-four hours."

The banker drew a deep breath of relief as each man took a bag of gold and quietly departed.

A few days after the papers were filled with the startling announcement that Mr. Slider, the well-known banker had absconded, and that an enormous amount of money was missing. Investigation of the books showed that he had been preparing for flight over a year, and rumor has it that he is now living somewhere in the South America. But that is one of the things about which nobody knows anything definite.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

And of Course, as is Generally the Case, He Found Out.

Morphine Prescribed as a Last Resort in a Desperate Case.

But a Much More Effective Remedy Was Discovered in the End.

"How is it that the Hawker Medicine Co. and their pills and tonic and rheumatism cure, cough and cold cure and other remedies are so much talked about all over the provinces?" was the query of a gentleman the other day.

"If I complain of a cold, I am advised to try Hawker's tonic. If I say I run down, Hawker's tonic is shouted at me. I feel a twinge of rheumatism, I am instructed to lay on Dr. Manning's German Remedy. If I am unfortunate enough to allude to my liver, Hawker's liver pills are put under my nose. If I speak of cholera, I am told that a man who builds himself up with Hawker's tonic and pills can ward off to his neck in cholera morbus. Why is this?"

In answer to this question the secret of the success of the Hawker Medicine Co.'s standard remedies may be illustrated by the following story which was told to a reporter on Friday. The narrator was Mrs. Mowry, wife of Capt. Justus Mowry, the well-known tugboat officer. The interview took place at her pleasant residence, Prince William street, whether a reporter went in company with Manager Russell. If any reader of this story has been or should be in the future subjected to the parent extremity of taking morphine for relief from the horrible pains of indigestion in its worst form, Mrs. Mowry's experience will be of the deepest interest and incalculable value.

The story may be briefly told. Mrs. Mowry was for two years a horrible sufferer from chronic indigestion. She could not sleep without the use of morphine. Her stomach was so weak that she could scarcely eat any kind of food without suffering immediate pain. In fact she seemed to have pains and aches all over her body, and became so nervous and weak and prostrated by her household duties. She tried a great many medicines and the doctors were prescribing for her nearly all the time, but she could get no relief. Sometimes for 24 hours at a time her suffering from cramps were without arousing suspicion, and if that could not be done, I would have had to come some other time."

"Precisely. Now what will you take in gold to go back to the station and report that you have not been able to find me?" "That would be a dangerous business," said Billy, quite honestly. "Give me a start of twenty-four hours and that is all I ask. Now, how much?"

"What do you say," he said at last, "to five thousand for me and three thousand apiece for each of the men?" "That would be seventeen thousand in all," said the banker.

"Well," said Billy, "suppose we make it twenty thousand as a lump sum; or, rather, as you wish twenty-four hours, I think, as time is valuable in a case like this, a thousand an hour would not be exorbitant. If you say twenty-four thousand in gold, it's a go."

"That is a large amount," said the banker. "Oh, very well, then," replied Billy. "We have only to do our duty. You are not absent; you are here. The amount is large, as you say, but you must remember that the risk is tremendous."

"Yes, I admit that," said the banker with a sigh; "but you said you would take twenty thousand or even seventeen thousand as a moment ago."

"There are no men to square, beside myself," answered the inspector, "and if one of them objected of course the game would be up. I shall not take the risk even of mentioning it to them for anything less than twenty-four, and if I think any longer about it I shall raise the price to thirty."

"I agree to the $24,000," said the banker hastily. "Can you make sure of your men-of-their silence?" "Reasonably sure," answered Billy. "The only question is, can we have the money in gold, here and now?"

"I am not sure that I can give you all that amount in gold, but I think I can," said the inspector, "I have a pocketbook he had with him and added some figures together."

"Yes," he said, "I can do it."

"Very well," said Billy, "it is a bargain."

Billy called his pals, and together they accompanied the banker to another place that contained a large safe, which Slider opened, and took out several bags, and gave them down a pair of scales from the top of the safe, saying: "You may weigh this, and you will find it correct. There are five bags here and they each contain $5,000."

"Open all the bags," said Billy, cautiously. The banker did so, and Billy ran a handful of gold from each of them through his fingers and found everything correct.

"How much does a thousand weigh?" he asked the banker, and on receiving his answer, placed one of the bags in the scales. "It is a pity to break bulk," said Billy.

"Very well," answered the banker. "Suppose you call your men in. I wish to be sure that you will keep your compact."

The four men were speedily inside the room, and their eyes opened as they saw the glitter of the gold. The inspector briefly detailed to the points of the bargain while the banker looked from man to man and listened anxiously.

"You agree to this?" said Billy, and each of the men nodded.

"You will have no further trouble from us," Mr. Slider, said Billy Haven, politely. "At least, for twenty-four hours."

The banker drew a deep breath of relief as each man took a bag of gold and quietly departed.

A few days after the papers were filled with the startling announcement that Mr. Slider, the well-known banker had absconded, and that an enormous amount of money was missing. Investigation of the books showed that he had been preparing for flight over a year, and rumor has it that he is now living somewhere in the South America. But that is one of the things about which nobody knows anything definite.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

And of Course, as is Generally the Case, He Found Out.

Morphine Prescribed as a Last Resort in a Desperate Case.

But a Much More Effective Remedy Was Discovered in the End.

"How is it that the Hawker Medicine Co. and their pills and tonic and rheumatism cure, cough and cold cure and other remedies are so much talked about all over the provinces?" was the query of a gentleman the other day.

"If I complain of a cold, I am advised to try Hawker's tonic. If I say I run down, Hawker's tonic is shouted at me. I feel a twinge of rheumatism, I am instructed to lay on Dr. Manning's German Remedy. If I am unfortunate enough to allude to my liver, Hawker's liver pills are put under my nose. If I speak of cholera, I am told that a man who builds himself up with Hawker's tonic and pills can ward off to his neck in cholera morbus. Why is this?"

In answer to this question the secret of the success of the Hawker Medicine Co.'s standard remedies may be illustrated by the following story which was told to a reporter on Friday. The narrator was Mrs. Mowry, wife of Capt. Justus Mowry, the well-known tugboat officer. The interview took place at her pleasant residence, Prince William street, whether a reporter went in company with Manager Russell. If any reader of this story has been or should be in the future subjected to the parent extremity of taking morphine for relief from the horrible pains of indigestion in its worst form, Mrs. Mowry's experience will be of the deepest interest and incalculable value.

The story may be briefly told. Mrs. Mowry was for two years a horrible sufferer from chronic indigestion. She could not sleep without the use of morphine. Her stomach was so weak that she could scarcely eat any kind of food without suffering immediate pain. In fact she seemed to have pains and aches all over her body, and became so nervous and weak and prostrated by her household duties. She tried a great many medicines and the doctors were prescribing for her nearly all the time, but she could get no relief. Sometimes for 24 hours at a time her suffering from cramps were without arousing suspicion, and if that could not be done, I would have had to come some other time."

"Precisely. Now what will you take in gold to go back to the station and report that you have not been able to find me?" "That would be a dangerous business," said Billy, quite honestly. "Give me a start of twenty-four hours and that is all I ask. Now, how much?"

"What do you say," he said at last, "to five thousand for me and three thousand apiece for each of the men?" "That would be seventeen thousand in all," said the banker.

"Well," said Billy, "suppose we make it twenty thousand as a lump sum; or, rather, as you wish twenty-four hours, I think, as time is valuable in a case like this, a thousand an hour would not be exorbitant. If you say twenty-four thousand in gold, it's a go."

"That is a large amount," said the banker. "Oh, very well, then," replied Billy. "We have only to do our duty. You are not absent; you are here. The amount is large, as you say, but you must remember that the risk is tremendous."

"Yes, I admit that," said the banker with a sigh; "but you said you would take twenty thousand or even seventeen thousand as a moment ago."

"There are no men to square, beside myself," answered the inspector, "and if one of them objected of course the game would be up. I shall not take the risk even of mentioning it to them for anything less than twenty-four, and if I think any longer about it I shall raise the price to thirty."

"I agree to the $24,000," said the banker hastily. "Can you make sure of your men-of-their silence?" "Reasonably sure," answered Billy. "The only question is, can we have the money in gold, here and now?"

"I am not sure that I can give you all that amount in gold, but I think I can," said the inspector, "I have a pocketbook he had with him and added some figures together."

"Yes," he said, "I can do it."

"Very well," said Billy, "it is a bargain."

Billy called his pals, and together they accompanied the banker to another place that contained a large safe, which Slider opened, and took out several bags, and gave them down a pair of scales from the top of the safe, saying: "You may weigh this, and you will find it correct. There are five bags here and they each contain $5,000."

"Open all the bags," said Billy, cautiously. The banker did so, and Billy ran a handful of gold from each of them through his fingers and found everything correct.

"How much does a thousand weigh?" he asked the banker, and on receiving his answer, placed one of the bags in the scales. "It is a pity to break bulk," said Billy.

"Very well," answered the banker. "Suppose you call your men in. I wish to be sure that you will keep your compact."

The four men were speedily inside the room, and their eyes opened as they saw the glitter of the gold. The inspector briefly detailed to the points of the bargain while the banker looked from man to man and listened anxiously.

"You agree to this?" said Billy, and each of the men nodded.

"You will have no further trouble from us," Mr. Slider, said Billy Haven, politely. "At least, for twenty-four hours."

The banker drew a deep breath of relief as each man took a bag of gold and quietly departed.

A few days after the papers were filled with the startling announcement that Mr. Slider, the well-known banker had absconded, and that an enormous amount of money was missing. Investigation of the books showed that he had been preparing for flight over a year, and rumor has it that he is now living somewhere in the South America. But that is one of the things about which nobody knows anything definite.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

And of Course, as is Generally the Case, He Found Out.

Morphine Prescribed as a Last Resort in a Desperate Case.

But a Much More Effective Remedy Was Discovered in the End.

"How is it that the Hawker Medicine Co. and their pills and tonic and rheumatism cure, cough and cold cure and other remedies are so much talked about all over the provinces?" was the query of a gentleman the other day.

"If I complain of a cold, I am advised to try Hawker's tonic. If I say I run down, Hawker's tonic is shouted at me. I feel a twinge of rheumatism, I am instructed to lay on Dr. Manning's German Remedy. If I am unfortunate enough to allude to my liver, Hawker's liver pills are put under my nose. If I speak of cholera, I am told that a man who builds himself up with Hawker's tonic and pills can ward off to his neck in cholera morbus. Why is this?"

In answer to this question the secret of the success of the Hawker Medicine Co.'s standard remedies may be illustrated by the following story which was told to a reporter on Friday. The narrator was Mrs. Mowry, wife of Capt. Justus Mowry, the well-known tugboat officer. The interview took place at her pleasant residence, Prince William street, whether a reporter went in company with Manager Russell. If any reader of this story has been or should be in the future subjected to the parent extremity of taking morphine for relief from the horrible pains of indigestion in its worst form, Mrs. Mowry's experience will be of the deepest interest and incalculable value.

The story may be briefly told. Mrs. Mowry was for two years a horrible sufferer from chronic indigestion. She could not sleep without the use of morphine. Her stomach was so weak that she could scarcely eat any kind of food without suffering immediate pain. In fact she seemed to have pains and aches all over her body, and became so nervous and weak and prostrated by her household duties. She tried a great many medicines and the doctors were prescribing for her nearly all the time, but she could get no relief. Sometimes for 24 hours at a time her suffering from cramps were without arousing suspicion, and if that could not be done, I would have had to come some other time."

"Precisely. Now what will you take in gold to go back to the station and report that you have not been able to find me?" "That would be a dangerous business," said Billy, quite honestly. "Give me a start of twenty-four hours and that is all I ask. Now, how much?"

"What do you say," he said at last, "to five thousand for me and three thousand apiece for each of the men?" "That would be seventeen thousand in all," said the banker.

"Well," said Billy, "suppose we make it twenty thousand as a lump sum; or, rather, as you wish twenty-four hours, I think, as time is valuable in a case like this, a thousand an hour would not be exorbitant. If you say twenty-four thousand in gold, it's a go."

"That is a large amount," said the banker. "Oh, very well, then," replied Billy. "We have only to do our duty. You are not absent; you are here. The amount is large, as you say, but you must remember that the risk is tremendous."

"Yes, I admit that," said the banker with a sigh; "but you said you would take twenty thousand or even seventeen thousand as a moment ago."

"There are no men to square, beside myself," answered the inspector, "and if one of them objected of course the game would be up. I shall not take the risk even of mentioning it to them for anything less than twenty-four, and if I think any longer about it I shall raise the price to thirty."

"I agree to the $24,000," said the banker hastily. "Can you make sure of your men-of-their silence?" "Reasonably sure," answered Billy. "The only question is, can we have the money in gold, here and now?"

"I am not sure that I can give you all that amount in gold, but I think I can," said the inspector, "I have a pocketbook he had with him and added some figures together."

"Yes," he said, "I can do it."

"Very well," said Billy, "it is a bargain."

Billy called his pals, and together they accompanied the banker to another place that contained a large safe, which Slider opened, and took out several bags, and gave them down a pair of scales from the top of the safe, saying: "You may weigh this, and you will find it correct. There are five bags here and they each contain $5,000."

"Open all the bags," said Billy, cautiously. The banker did so, and Billy ran a handful of gold from each of them through his fingers and found everything correct.

"How much does a thousand weigh?" he asked the banker, and on receiving his answer, placed one of the bags in the scales. "It is a pity to break bulk," said Billy.

"Very well," answered the banker. "Suppose you call your men in. I wish to be sure that you will keep your compact."

The four men were speedily inside the room, and their eyes opened as they saw the glitter of the gold. The inspector briefly detailed to the points of the bargain while the banker looked from man to man and listened anxiously.

"You agree to this?" said Billy, and each of the men nodded.

"You will have no further trouble from us," Mr. Slider, said Billy Haven, politely. "At least, for twenty-four hours."

The banker drew a deep breath of relief as each man took a bag of gold and quietly departed.

A few days after the papers were filled with the startling announcement that Mr. Slider, the well-known banker had absconded, and that an enormous amount of money was missing. Investigation of the books showed that he had been preparing for flight over a year, and rumor has it that he is now living somewhere in the South America. But that is one of the things about which nobody knows anything definite.

RAILWAYS.

PICNICS.

SHORE LINE RY. Lepreaux.

Dates are being rapidly filled. Send at once for our Circular, showing rates, etc., or call at 3 Pugsley Building, - - City.

YARMOUTH & ANNAPOLIS RY.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENTS.

On and after Thursday, June 18th, 1893, trains will run daily (Sundays excepted) as follows:

LEAVE YARMOUTH-Express daily at 8.10 a.m. 12.10 p.m.; Passengers and Freight Trains, Monday and Friday at 1.45 p.m.; arrive at Annapolis at 7.00 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 1.45 p.m. Arrive at Weymouth at 4.30 p.m.

LEAVE ANNAPOLIS-Express daily at 12.30 p.m. 4.45 p.m.; Passengers and Freight Trains, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 6.50 a.m.; arrive at Yarmouth at 11.15 a.m.

LEAVE WEYMOUTH-Passengers and Freight Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 8.15 a.m. Arrive at Yarmouth at 11.15 a.m.

CONNECTIONS-At Annapolis with trains of the Annapolis and Annapolis Railway. At Digby with City of Montserrat for St. John every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and from St. John every Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. At Yarmouth with steamers of the Yarmouth Steamship Co. for Boston every Wednesday and Saturday mornings. With Stage daily (Sundays excepted) and from Barrington, Shelburne and Liverpool. Through tickets may be obtained at 128 Herts St., Halifax, and the principal stations on the Windsor and Annapolis Railway. J. BRIDGES, General Superintendent, Yarmouth, N.S.

Intercolonial Railway.

1892-WINTER ARRANGEMENT-1893.

On and after Monday, the 17th day of Oct., 1892, the Trains of this Railway will run daily-Sunday excepted-as follows:

TRAINS WILL LEAVE ST. JOHN:

Express for Campbellton, Pugwash, Pictou and Halifax..... 7.00 Express for Halifax..... 13.30 Express for Sussex..... 16.30 Through Express for Point du Chene, Quebec, Montreal and Chicago..... 16.55.

A Parcel Car runs each way on Express trains leaving St. John at 7.00 o'clock and Halifax at 7.00 o'clock. Passengers for St. John for Quebec and Montreal take through Sleeping Cars at Montreal, at 12.40 o'clock.

TRAINS WILL ARRIVE AT ST. JOHN:

Express from Sussex..... 8.25 Express from Chicago, Montreal, Quebec (Monday excepted)..... 10.25 Express from Point du Chene and Moncton..... 10.25 Express from Halifax, Pictou and Campbellton..... 19.00 Express from Halifax and Pugwash..... 22.20

CANADIAN PACIFIC RY.

WE ARE NOW RUNNING THE FOLLOWING LINES OF OUR UNRIVALLED

Tourist Sleeping Cars

West, from Windsor Street Station, MONTREAL, as follows:

DETROIT AND CHICAGO.

Every Wednesday at 8.15 p.m.

Seattle, Wash.

and points on the Pacific Coast. Every Saturday at 11.45 a.m.

MINNEAPOLIS AND ST. PAUL.

Holders of Second-Class Passage Tickets to or through these points, will be accommodated in these Cars, on payment of a small additional charge per berth. Particulars of ticket agents. D. McNICOLL, C. E. McPHERSON, Gen'l Pass. Agent, and Gen'l Pass. Agent, ST. JOHN, N.S.

STEAMERS.