were still in progress. He digressed here to abuse Sir John for saying that British Columbia could secede if the terms were not carried out. He did not believe British Columbia would accept the advice of a defeated and desperate party leader. (Groans and cheers.) He defended his proposed land and water summer route. It was the cheapest way to the Rocky Mountains. The remainder of the route could be prosecuted as the country would afford it. The immediate completion of the branch from Fort Garry to Pembina would give us a speedy connection with the North West. Surveys now completed showed that there were not many engineering difficulties between Lakes Nipissing and Superior. He then explained the Government scheme. The section between Nipigon and Fort Garry should be commenced as soon as possible. The section eastward of Nipissing was not required at present. The most difficult section was that between the North West and the Pacific Coast. This section could be commenced when a pass was found through the Rocky Mountains and Western terminus located. Nothing would be done on that section until a suitable route were found. After recess the Premier continued showing the means adopted by other countries in Railway construction, and entered into a detailed explanation of his scheme as outlined in the resolutions. It was physically impossible to keep faith with British Columbia, but the Government would do their utmost to carry out this great enterprise. (Cheers.)

Dr. Tupper thought it would save time if the resolutions were passed pro formâ and discussion had upon the second reading of the bill.

The Premier had no objections to this course, but had expected a discussion now.

Mr. Blake insisted upon the discussion going on.

Mr. Hilyard Cameron said the Opposition would not be dictated to as to their course.

Dr. Tupper said that in the first set of resolutions, published in the papers, no mention was made of a money subsidy. In the resolutions submitted to-day, money subsidies were promised amounting to $27,000,000. (Sensation.) As the resolutions were only before the House a few hours, he thought it more satisfactory that the discussion could be had on the second reading of the bill.

After further discussion, the resolutions passed in Committee.

In the Senate, yesterday, a lively discussion took place on the resolution censuring Government for unjustifiable dismissal of officials. The resolution was withdrawn, after a distinct pledge from the Government that no further dismissals would take place anywhere except for incompetency or misconduct, but not for political reasons.

The Montreal Harbor Commission—Tupper on Cartwright's Deficit.

OTTAWA, May 13.

Matters were lively last night. A lengthy discussion arose on the bill reconstructing Trinity Board and Harbor Commissioners of Montreal. It was vigorously opposed by Mr. Mitchell and Dr. Tupper. The bill gives the Government power to appoint a majority of the Board, and, consequently, control the expenditure of all money for harbor improvements.

On a motion to go into Committee of Supply Dr. Tupper delivered an able speech sustaining his position that there was no deficit, and showing that Cartwright in order to make up a deficiency, had placed half a million dollars to current account that was chargeable to capital, and that the principal sums in the supplementary estimates were for expenditure in 1872, 1873 and 1874, and should not be calculated as for 1874 and '75. He also showed that the Minister of Finance, with unexpended money on hand for several purposes, had placed sums in the supplementary estimates, adding to those sums which it was not possible for him to spend.

Cartwright replied in a jocular way, without touching the main points of Tupper's argument.

After some discussion the House adjourned at 1.45.

Circuit Court.

The Grand Jury met this forenoon and the case of the Queen vs. John Henry and David Magee, charged with going on board the British vessel Kate Saucton and assaulting the officers of the vessel, was ready to go before them. Chief Justice Ritchie called their attention to the facts of the case. The prisoners had gone on board accompanied by a number of men. They had been discharged and, having previously had some dispute, had apparently gone on board for the express purpose of committing the assault. Those who had accompanied them were equally culpable, and he reflected on the police officers for not having the shore men arrested as well as the two who were sailors. The nature of the case had drawn his attention to the unfortunate disputes between labor and capital that have been of so frequent occurrence during the past few years. The various combinations of labor in direct opposition to capital were to be reprehended by all who had the good of the country at heart. The associations that ruled the harbor were now sapping the foundations of our great industries. We do not live in an age or country where communist ideas rule. It is our boast to encourage the accumulation of property. We ask the stranger to come to our shores, and hold out the inducement that he will have a chance to lay up a fortune for himself. And while saying this we, in point of fact, allow that property to be taken charge of by a society and ruled for their own interest. No man or body of men should have the power to say how many hours all shall work, or how much shall be paid for that work. Nor ought we in the least degree prevent a laborer making as good a bargain as he can. It is his right and duty to do so. The laborer has a right to say—"I've got labor, you've got capital; judge me by my ability, by my mental vigor, my physical power, and my will to work." The workman must be judge of himself, and has no right to have the idle or infirm attached to him as a very Siamese brother, bound to support him, and receive the same amount of wages. What sort of a feeling is this to instill into our children, that as others work so must they, that no matter what their ability they must work the same as others, their conditions to be the same, and not one iota better? What encouragement does this give to the rising generation? It is a millstone about their necks, preventing their ever rising. It was with deep regret that he had read in the public papers that a certain society (the Bakers) had combined together for what seemed a dreadful purpose. At least to him no milder term seemed appropriate. These men in a respectable calling had decided to have but one apprentice, but one apprentice! If this society has a right to make such a law all others have. You, Mr. Foreman [James E. Barnes], have a large establishment, and some combination may say that you shall have but one apprentice in order to keep people out of the business and make competition less. The legal profession may combine and say that each lawyer may have but one student, because they are increasing too fast; and so with all trades and professions. If this is a correct principle what, in the name of reason, is this common school discussion for, and why provide free education for all? Do such persons ever ask what they shall do with their children who will fill their places when they grow old and pass away? It is against every principle of political economy, and every sense of justice to our children. He had the highest respect for labor. In his own calling, from his youth up, he had labored hard. His Honor then read the law bearing on such combinations. If these combinations do overstep the law, the law's administrators should not fail to do their duty. A Dominion statute of 1869 provides that if, for influencing labor, a body of men shall come together and an unlawful assault shall take place they are punishable with imprisonment for two years. If that law is broken he would do his duty promptly and fearlessly, though a combination, no matter how large, should oppose him. The law against intimidation of employer and employe was also ably explained by His Honor, who apologized for occupying so much time, but thought that the importance of the case demanded it, and he hoped that though the fury these ideas, which he believed were those of every right thinking man, would be diffused throughout the community. One feeling should prevail—that every man, from the humblest to the highest, shall have the right of occupying his time properly, without fear of intimidation or compulsion.

The case of Day et. al. vs. Murray et. al. is now before the court, Messrs. Morrison & King for plaintiffs, and S. R. Thomson and W. H. Tuck, Esqs., for defendants. It is an action to recover for damage done a wharf in Carleton, owned by plaintiffs, by the schr. Gipsy, and the tug boat that was taking the Gipsy out coming in collision with it. The plaintiffs want to be paid for their wharf; the owners of the Gipsy want the tug-boat owners to pay the damage; and the tug-boat owners are equally anxious to make the schooner foot the bill; while both parties would prefer to allow the plaintiffs to stand their own loss.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AMONG the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tenrings need this defence; and it is unwise to without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centered on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured. Prepared by
