

THE PRINCE OF PEACE

(Christmas Lesson)

Isaiah 11:1-10; Matthew 2:1-12; Luke 2:8-14

It was Christmas Day, and the children were excited and happy. "But what a very large family," you would have said, for there were more children than in the largest Sunday school you ever saw. And not one of them had father or mother living, for they were little Armenian children; and because people in Canada had sent money to save them they had been brought to a home called an orphanage. Before the terrible war times, many of the children had had beautiful homes and dainty clothing; but for many months they had wandered about, ragged and hungry, sleeping in the street or by the roadside. How wonderful the orphanage seemed, where they could have a real bath, and some clean clothes and some bread and rice. Do you think that is a
