I was a fearful sufferer from eczema for many years. The disease centred in both limbs below the knees. The left especially was swollen to alarming dimensions, while the inflammation, irritation and hard, scaly condition induced a degree of suffering which only the mercy of God prevented me from ending in suicide.

I spent the best of three years on my back, besides different periods in three hospitals. When at home I could not go as far as the next room without the aid of crutches, and altogether my case was considered past help, for I had had the best skill in the country to no purpose.

I have now used five bottles of Ozone I have now used five bottles of Ozone and I rejoice to say that both limbs are reduced to their normal size, the burning is entirely sone and I can walk alone with perfect ease, although I am now sixty years of age.

The Ozone also cured an advanced stage of liver disorder, and I am willing at all times to tell my experience to other sufferers.

MRS. ELLEN SMITH, 31 St. Andre St., Montreal.

Wanted --- A Chronic Case of Eczema That Ozone Will Not Cure.

That Ozone Will Not Cure.

Powley's Liquified Ozone has been used with such pronounced success in cases of Eczema and other skin and blood diseases that we are positive that there is no case so bad that it will not cure it. By destroying the germs of the disease it goes right to the root of the trouble and effects cures when drug preparations prove most disastrous failures. Mrs. Smith's case is a case in point. Though sixty years of age Ozone cured her after all drug preparations had failed. Powley's Liquified Ozone is sold by 'all reliable druggists at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

"Now, then, young man," yawned Uncle Bill as he got slowly out of his easy chair and surveyed his oldest nephew, who had begun to show marked signs of unrest over his occupation of building block churches, "what shall we do to put in the rest of this rainy Sunday afternoon?" "Let's play pingpong," Bobby sug-

"You're not big enough yet. Guess

"You're not big enough yet. Guess again, or I'll pingpong-you."
"Let's tell stories," ventured Bobby.
"All right, old sport, You begin."
"We-ell," drawled the youngster in the singsong of rote, climbing into Uncle Bill's lap, "once on a time, w'y, they wasn't an-ny little boys 'n' little girls, 'n' pretty soon they was Cain 'n' Abel. 'N' they didn't have an-ny sisters or brothers or nothin' cept just sisters or brothers or nothin' 'cept just a papa 'n' mamma, nor no Uncle Bills or nothin'. 'N' their papa 'n' mamma were cross one time 'n' told their little

"UNCLE BILL, WHAT MAKES YOUR EYES SO BIG 'N' SHINY?" boys to go 'n' play, 'n' Cain he played too rough, 'n' he killed his little brother with a jawbone of a jackass!"
"No!" ejaculated Uncle Bill in horror. "Did he now, really!"

"Yes, sir. 'N' that's all of that story.
"Thele Bill." "Did he now, really?"

Now you tell one, Uncle Bill."
"Well," began Uncle Bill, "once there was a lazy old uncle, and he had a nephew whom he loved very much." "I know somebody else you love," remarked Bobby, wriggling. "Don't you. Uncle Bill?" "Oh, lots of people," the young man agreed boldly. "Whom in particular,

"Miss Josephine," said Bobby in accents of firm conviction. Uncle Bill shifted uneasily, but gave his nephew a hug.

"What made you think so?" he asked, with a studied air of indiffer-Bobby was silent, but his little mind busied itself wondering what caused Uncle Bill's chest to rise so high when he breathed the long breath he had just taken. It was intoxicating to feel oneself lifted up and let down exactly like being on a seesaw. 'Do it again, Uncle Bill!" he cried.

"It's lot of fun." Uncle Bill did not seem to hear. He was looking wistfully out of the window, and Bobby looked, too, but saw

"Do you love her, Bobby?" Uncle Bill inquired presently, smoothing the child's yellow hair. "Bobby, do you love Miss Josephine?"

"Yes," Bobby answered. "Why? What makes you-do you

"W'y, Uncle Bill, the other day I fell 'n' hurted my knee, 'n' she w'y, she kissed me 'n' made my knee all well." "H'm!" muttered Uncle Bill. "Should think it might." "Uncle Bill," asked Bobby, "did Miss Outre bill, asked rooply, did ansa Josephine ever kiss you?"

"Little boys shouldn't ask questions," was the quick reply, and a soft cheek was drawn close to a rougher

"I won't," Bobby agreed. "But did she, Uncle Bill?" "Yes, little boy, she did." "Well, but didn't it make you all well?" "Did you hurt yourself?"

"Where-in your knee?"

"In your stomach?" "There or thereabout."
"Did it hurt much?"

"I say, Bobby," exclaimed Uncle Bill, with more or less feeling, "let you and me talk of something else. You are a very little boy, and you ask questions that are painful. I don't"—
"These it burt you yet?" operied Rob.

"There it is," he announced after a careful search, spreading a paper on Uncle Bill's knee. "It's the 'twos,'" he remarked, indicating a tipsy column of hieroglyphics, the only legible character in which was the letter X. That means 'times.' "

"A very interesting exhibit," observed Uncle Bill. "What is that letter you have with the—the bunch, Bobby? No, not the picture card, the letter—the one in the blue envelope. Let me see it. What don't boys have in their pockets? Why, bless me, it's

"Am I, old man?" Uncle Bill said in a queer voice. "Tell me, Bobby, when Miss Josephine kissed you, how did you feel?" "All nice," answered Bobby, with self satisfaction. Uncle Bill hugged his nephew again. "Did that hug hurt you, Bobby?" he asked. "Some," the child replied.

"Then you get an umbrella, Bobby, just as quickly as ever you can, and I'll take you en my back, and we'll run over and see if Miss Josephine make us feel all nice again, as you call

"Are you going, too, Uncle Bill?" "Right now?"

"The sooner the better."
"Yes," said childish philosophy sagely, "when you hurt anywhere, it's best to get it cured right away."

"Why don't you go 'n' see Miss Josephine? She'll try again. Maybe—W'y, she'll have better luck."
"I can't."
"Oh, because. What a lot of questions you can ask and how little you know, Bobby!"
"I know the 'twos' in multiplication table anyway—so now. Miss Josephine taught me yistiday. See? I wrote 'em all down."

I testify.

Mr. Willard Thompson, McNeill's Mills, P.E.L., writes us as follows: "I wish te state to you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Soms time ago my blood got out of order and many boils appeared on my neck, legs and arms. They were so painful that I could not sleep at night. After having tried many different remedies without any success, I finally decided, on the advice of a friend, to use Burdock Blood Bitters he boils had completely disappeared, and I wish to emphasize tha fact that I think Burdock Blood Bitters the best blood purifier on the market to-day."

"SPORTING LIFE."

"Sporting Life" was written by Cecil Raleigh and Seymour Hicks, authors of the "Sporting Duchess," "The Great Ruby" and other London successes, and in plot and atmosphere is essentially English. It tells the story of a manly young Englishman, who ning qualities of his race horses to the enrichment of the bookmakers and the depletion of his own furtune. Not only has he incurred some heavy debts of honor, but he has had his name forged for several thousands, a liability which, for the sake of his fiancee, Lord Woodstock chivalrously accepts. Ruin now stares him in the face, and when he is offered twenty thousand pounds to lose a race for which his horse is entered, the temptation is naturally great. Stage heroes, however, always spurn such dishonoring suggestions. Lord Woodstock does so, and, happily, all goes well in the end with his horse and dishonoring suggestions. Lord Wooddishonoring suggestions. Lord Woodstock does so, and, happily, all goes well in the end with his horse and himself. His sweetheart's brother strangles the woman (Mrs. de Carteret) for whose sake the check was forged, and with the aid of a sympathetic money lender means are found to smooth the way for the union of the, young nobleman and Norah, and the required comic relief is supplied by a stable groom and his "intended."
The management is said to have gathered together a company far above the average standard of merit, and many well-known names are found among the people employed in the production. The show comes to the Grand on Saturday night.

A Story That Varies.

Grand on Saturday night.

There is a story more or less diffused of a young bride on her wedding day concealing herself in one of those ancient carved chests of large size. After she had got in the lid closed and she found herself unable to raise it again, for it fastened with a spring and she was shut in. Search was made for her in every quarter but the right one, and great perplexity and dismay were caused by her disappearance. It was not till years after when chance led to the opening of the chest that the body of the young bride was discovered and the mystery of her disappearance solved.

The story is found in so many places that it may be questioned whether it is true of any one of them. Rogers tells it of a palace in Modena. The chest in which the poor bride was found is shown at Bramshill, in Hampshire, the residence of Sir John Cope. Another similar chest with precisely the same story attached to it was long shown at Marwell Old Hall, between Winchester and Bishop's Waltham.

The folk tale of Catskin or Peau d'Ane represents the girl flying with her bridal dresses from a marriage that is repugnant to her, and as this tale is found all over Europe it may have metamorphosed itself into that of the bride who got into a chest and died there.-Cornhill Magazine.

Silence Often Best Rebuke, Because a fault exists is no reason that it should be pointed out with no regard to time or place. It might not be difficult to prove that there is wisdom in allowing persons to make mis-takes unrebuked for the time, but such wisdom can only flourish in a mind strong enough not to accept the evil of the day as final. No mother, for instance, really thinks that her little daughter of twelve or fourteen is going to be a lifelong stat-tern because she keeps her bureau drawers in a tumble and is often seen without proper buttons, nor does any mother believe that a lie on the lips of her little son condemns him to a life of

The faults must be met, but if they are not met by instant fault finding, but rather by the inculcation of higher standards and better habits, the actual offense needs little comment. Indeed absolute silence after a misdemeanor is often a more severe rebuke than a storm of protest and correction. To make this silence judicious we must first of all cultivate in ourselves a just perception of values and propor-tions. We must train ourselves when to see and when not to see, what to leave out and what to keep in our
